Region getting a second area code: 364

Ten-digit dialing required when plan is fully implemented

By Chuck Stinnett

A second area code is coming to western Kentucky in 2014 that will require 10-digit dialing — using the area code plus the phone number — for local calls.

That's the solution that the Kentucky Public Service Commission had been expected to take to ensure that the region doesn't run out of telephone numbers in a year or so. The PSC announced its decision Monday morning.

The 364 area code will be superimposed onto the region's existing 270 area code, meaning two area codes will coexist in communities such as Henderson, Owensboro, Madisonville, Hopkinsville, Paducah, Bowling Green and Elizabethtown as well as rural western Kentucky.

Current landline and cellphone customers will keep their current area code and phone numbers; the new 364 area code will be given to future phone customers, starting in 2014.

It will mark the first time that an area code overlay has been applied in Kentucky. In the past when a region started running out of phone numbers, area codes have been split in two, such as when the 502 area code was split in 1999; at that time, the Louisville-Frankfort area kept 502 while western Kentucky was switched 270.

However, overlays have been used in other areas, ranging from giant metro areas such as New York City to the entire state of West Virginia.

Citizens and especially business owners who attended public hearings in western Kentucky this fall overwhelmingly said they preferred an overlay that would allow them to keep their current area code and phone number, even if it meant adding a second area code to the region

See OVERLAY, 8A

How it will work

Ten things to know about western Kentucky's new area code:

- All current area code 270 numbers remain unchanged. Everyone with a 270 area code number can keep it. Nobody is required to change their area code or phone number.
- The overlay affects both landline and wireless services.
- Area code 364 will be overlaid on top of area code 270. That means that area codes 270 and 364 will occupy the same physical space — western Kentucky — beginning March 2014.
- To distinguish between phone numbers with area code 270 and those with area code 364, 10-digit

Two funerals begin town's grim procession

By Allen G. Breed and Helen O'Neill
Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Conn. – Opening a long and almost unbearable procession of grief, Newtown began burying its dead Monday, laying to rest two 6-year-old boys — one who was crazy about the New York Giants and one whose twin sister survived the rampage.

Noah Pozner

Two funeral homes filled with mourners for Noah Pozner and Jack Pinto, the first of the 20 children killed in last week's school massacre to receive funerals.

The gunman also killed six adults at Sandy Hook Elementary, and his mother in her home, before committing suicide.

A rabbi presided at Noah's service, and in keeping with Jewish tradition, the boy was laid to rest in a simple brown wooden casket with a Star of David on it.

"If Noah had not been taken from us, he would have become a great man. He would been a wonderful husband and a loving father," Noah's uncle, Alexis Haller, told mourners, according to remarks he provided to The Associated Press. Both services were closed to the news media.

Noah's twin, Arielle, who was assigned to a different classroom, survived the killing frenzy by 20-year-old Adam Lanza, an attack so horrifying that authorities could not say three days later whether the school would ever reopen.

Newtown, a community of 27,000 people, will face many more funerals over

Focus groups are planned on school polling data

Henderson County school students are going to get a chance to explain their views expressed in a recent poll, which showed that 45 percent describe themselves as stuck or discouraged.

Darrell Daigle, director of secondary education, presented the Gallup poll results Monday to the Henderson County Board of Education, and told members that focus groups will be formed to get students to explain why they answered the way they did to pollsters.

"We can only guess at why the kids responded the way they did," Daigle said. "The ones who are going to tell us why the results came out the way they did are the students."

"This is some really positive stuff," said board member Jon Sights. "I'm really happy to see us doing this" to get baseline data that could be used to help deter such incidents as the recent tragedy in Newtown, Conn.

Board member Greg Hunsaker asked when the board could expect to see expanded information from the focus groups.

"A lot is going to depend on what the kids have to tell us," Daigle responded. "It's kind of an art to interpret people's feelings as much as it is a science." Board Chairman Ben Johnston said the topic will be revisited by the board once that information is available.

Mass murder rate relatively steady over last three decades

By Thomas Hargrove
Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON – Friday's horrific slaying of 26 children and adults at Sandy Hook Elementary in Newtown, Conn., joins a growing list of outrages committed at schools, theaters, shopping malls and other public places.

But the occurrence of multiple and mass murder in the United States has held constant during the last 30 years, even though the incidence of homicides and other kinds of violent crimes has been cut nearly in half since the early 1990s.

From 1980 through 2010, there have been 20,223 cases of homicide involving at least two victims, Scripps Howard News Service has found in analyzing data it assembled from FBI files and from individual police departments that do not report murder cases to the federal government.

The study found at least 994 acts of mass murder, generally defined as the killing of four or more people in a single incident. That works out to about 32 acts of mass murder each year during the last 31 years.

"Unfortunately, we haven't been able to do a great deal to reduce mass killing. It has been virtually a straight line over time," said Jack Levin, a criminologist at Northeastern University in Boston who has extensively studied serial and mass murder.

Governor's tax commission issues report

■ Proposals said to create fairer code

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – A panel appointed by Gov. Steve Beshear to review Kentucky's tax system on Monday recommended dozens of changes that include lowering individual and corporate tax rates, raising the cigarette tax and expanding the sales tax to certain services.

Changes suggested by the Governor's Blue Ribbon Commission on Tax Reform would generate about $659 million in additional state revenue each year, said Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson, who headed the group that spent months studying the state's tax code.

He said the proposals would create a fairer tax code for families and businesses.

The Democratic governor praised the group for its efforts to propose a tax code that's fairer, simpler and more responsive to a modern economy.

"I will review this report and will discuss the findings with legislators as we seek ways to make sure our state has the resources it needs to meet the needs of our people," the governor said in a statement.

It will be up to lawmakers to decide whether to make changes to state tax laws. The state General Assembly convenes next month. Democrats control the state House, while Republicans are in charge of the Senate.

State Rep. Rick Rand, chairman of the House budget committee, said House leaders looked forward to meeting with the governor and Senate leaders to discuss tax modernization efforts.

"It will take all of us working together to accomplish any meaningful changes," said Rand, D-Bedford.

The commission recommends more than 50 proposals, including lowering the state's top corporate tax rate to 5.8 percent from 6 percent.

Individual income tax rates also would drop from 5.8 percent to 5.5 percent for adjusted gross income between $8,001 and $75,000. For income of $75,001 and higher, the rate would fall from 6 percent to 5.8 percent.

Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii dead at 88

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Recovering from war wounds that left him with one arm, Danny Inouye wanted a cigarette and needed a light.

The nurse at the Army hospital in Michigan threw a pack of matches on his chest. He wanted to curse her. Instead, she taught him how to light it one-handed.

"Then she said, 'I'm not going to be around here for the rest of your life. You'll have to learn how to light your own matches, cut your own meat, dress yourself and do everything else. So from now on you're going to be learning,'" Inouye recalled decades later.

From that moment on it seemed like nothing would stop Daniel K. Inouye, who died Monday after a uniquely American life defined by heroism in war and decades of service in the Senate. Inouye, who broke racial barriers on Capitol Hill and played key roles in congressional investigations of the Watergate and Iran-Contra scandals, was 88.

Sen. Daniel Inouye

A senator since January 1963, Inouye was currently the longest serving senator and was president pro tempore of the Senate. His office said Monday that he died of respiratory complications.

Less than an hour after Inouye's passing, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid announced Inouye's death to a stunned chamber. "Our friend Daniel Inouye has died," Reid said somberly. Shocked members of the Senate stood in the aisles or slumped in their chairs.

Inouye married Margaret Shinobu Awamura in 1949. Their only child, Daniel Jr., was born in 1964. When his wife died in 2006, Inouye said, "It was a most special blessing to have had Maggie in my life for 58 years."

He remarried in 2008, to Irene Hirano, a Los Angeles community leader.

Public record

The following information is based on public records from local and area law enforcement agencies and/or court systems:

HENDERSON POLICE DEPARTMENT

■ Jessica R. Thompson, age unavailable, 1800 block of Turnagain Drive, was arrested early Monday morning and charged with custodial interference after a missing juvenile was found with her. Thompson was lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center.

■ Delbert Crow, 37, Evansville, was arrested Wednesday and charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance, first-degree wanton endangerment and driving under the influence.

Crow was found passed out in the driver's seat of his vehicle with the engine running around 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday. The car was located in the 3100 block of U.S. 41-North. City police said Crow's juvenile son was in the vehicle with him.

Crow was found in possession of a quantity of suspected methamphetamine, drug paraphernalia and cash.

Employees with the Bank of Henderson reported Thursday that someone deposited a forged check into an account and withdrew money from it. The check's value was more than $500.

HENDERSON COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

■ The sheriff's office charged two people in connection with metal thefts from Gibbs Die Casting.

Jeffery D. Skaggs, 53, first block of Pope Street, was arrested Thursday and charged with theft over $500.

Paul Viars, 53, 5800 section of Kentucky 283, also was arrested Thursday and charged with two counts of theft over $500.

■ Mary Herrington, 68, Evansville, was arrested Thursday and charged with receiving stolen property under $10,000 and carrying a concealed deadly weapon. Herrington was arrested after License Plate Recognition software installed on a sheriff's department cruiser scanned a license plate which alerted the deputy that the car she was driving had been reported stolen from Evansville.

After confirming that the vehicle was stolen, Herrington, was stopped and arrested.

Authorities said Herrington had purchased the vehicle through an arrangement her son had made for her. During the arrest, it was discovered that Herrington had a loaded handgun in her purse.

Officials said the Evansville Police Department will continue with the investigation since the vehicle was reported stolen from that area.

■ Someone stole a gas generator from the Brain Injury Adventure Camp located on Northern Star Drive. The crime was reported Thursday.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Those charged with crimes are considered innocent until they are found guilty in a court of law. Every effort is made by this newspaper to report the final disposition of each case. In the event we fail to do so, a call to our newsroom, 827-2000, will prompt a background check on those cases and, if necessary, a published report on the final disposition.

Yarmuth speaks out for gun measures

■ Legislator urges Congress to stand up to NRA

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – The only Democrat who will remain in Kentucky's congressional delegation next year said Monday that he was wrong for not speaking up sooner about gun violence and that legislators should not fear the pro-gun lobby in passing stricter controls aimed at avoiding a repeat of the carnage at a Connecticut school.

U.S. Rep. John Yarmuth has been willing to take stands that rile gun-rights activists. He supports reinstating the federal ban on assault weapons. He has co-sponsored legislation to require background checks for buyers at gun shows and to prohibit magazine clips that allow a shooter to fire off numerous rounds of ammunition without reloading.

Yet he sounded remorseful for remaining mostly silent about the issue.

"I am now as sorry for that as I am for what happened to the families who lost so much in this most recent, but sadly not isolated, tragedy," Yarmuth said in his hometown of Louisville, where he went to a homeless shelter to pass out holiday cards.

Later, his voice choking with emotion, he said, "I will not be silent any longer."

Americans have the right to defend themselves and their property, Yarmuth said. And the elementary school massacre in Connecticut by a gunman that left 26 victims, including 20 children, probably could not have been prevented by any specific gun-control law, he said.

But he urged Congress to take "meaningful action" to try to prevent such bloodshed. In doing so, Yarmuth said, it should stand up to the National Rifle Association, which he said has spent millions of dollars "instilling fear in our citizens and our politicians."

"Many of my colleagues are afraid that their support of efforts to reduce gun violence will bring the wrath of the NRA down on them," Yarmuth said. "I believe it is more rational to fear guns than it is to fear the illusory political power of the NRA."

The NRA did not immediately respond to a call and email seeking comment to Yarmuth's remarks.

Few Kentucky politicians speak out against the NRA in a state where gun ownership is a cherished right. Last month, voters in the Bluegrass State overwhelmingly approved a ballot measure that makes hunting and fishing a constitutional right.

Asked why he had not been more vocal about gun violence in the past, Yarmuth pointed to what he considered the political realities.

"I think it was probably just the feeling of helplessness that I would be a voice crying in the wilderness," he said. "That was my mistake. It's not going to happen anymore."

Yarmuth, who received an "F" rating from the NRA, won re-election to a fourth term last month.

Kentucky priest dying of cancer scheduled for sexual abuse trial

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – A Louisville Catholic priest with terminal cancer is scheduled to go on trial next year to face charges he sexually abused two boys in the 1970s.

Attorneys had delayed the trial in May because doctors said there was a possibility the Rev. James Schook, who has stage four skin cancer, might not live to the end of the year.

On Monday attorneys agreed on a June 24 trial date for Schook to face seven counts of sodomy.

Jefferson County Commonwealth's Attorney John Balliet said after a brief court hearing Monday that he had spoken with a doctor who said it's possible Schook, 65, could live for several more years. Balliet said he also received a letter from Schook's attorney that said Schook's health status remains the same as it had been in May.

Balliet said that made him re-evaluate and decide to move forward to seek a trial date on behalf of the two alleged victims.

One of the men, Michael Stansbury, said he was pleased to hear a date has been set but that he remains frustrated because he brought his allegations against Schook in 2008.

"Right now I'm kind of in shock, because the court system I think was hoping he would die so they didn't have to go through it," Stansbury said Monday in a phone interview.

Stansbury said he was molested by Schook in the 1970s when Stansbury was in the youth group at St. Thomas More Church in Louisville, where Schook was an assistant pastor. Stansbury said he hesitated for decades to reveal the abuse because Schook knew his family and even officiated at Stansbury's second wedding.

"I need closure and clarity to it," said Stansbury, now 52. "It's devastated my whole life."

The Archdiocese of Louisville barred Schook, most recently the pastor of St. Ignatius Martyr Parish, from public ministry in 2009 after the abuse allegations surfaced. It was the first time Schook, a priest since 1975, had faced abuse allegations, according to the archdiocese.

Schook was permanently removed from ministry in 2010 after an archdiocese review board concluded that there were credible allegations that Schook sexually abused a teenager in 1985.

Schook was indicted on the sodomy charges in June 2011 and is free on a $10,000 bond.

Security cameras used in new Owensboro park

OWENSBORO – Owensboro police are using security cameras placed around a new public park to keep an eye on what's happening even when they are blocks away.

Police department spokesman Sgt. David Powell said the cameras supplement officers walking through Smothers Park as well as bicycle patrols in the area.

The cameras cover the main areas of the park and some swivel to scan across the park. Powell told the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer (http://bit.ly/ULVSzn) officers cannot control the cameras remotely yet, but said that technology is available.

The cameras can be viewed, via the Internet, from the front desk at the department, from officers' desks and from any patrol car that has a mobile data terminal.

"It's just another tool in the tool box," Powell said.

Three men escape from Calloway County jail

MURRAY – Authorities in western Kentucky are looking for three inmates who escaped from the Calloway County Jail.

Kentucky State Police said the men got of the jail in Murray by jumping over a barbed wire fence shortly after 8 p.m. Sunday.

Terry W. Hardin, who is 23, is a black man with a shaved head, who stands 5-foot-7 and weighs 174 pounds. Tab Delancey is white, is 47 years old, is 5-foot-7 and 185 pounds. Bradley Cathey is 23, 5-foot-11 and 205 pounds.

Hardin and Delancey were held on burglary charges. Cathey was held on a parole violation charge.

Tips should be phoned to the KSP at (800) 222-5555. The fugitive might be traveling in a red 1997 Pontiac Grand Prix.

Paducah police searching for missing woman

PADUCAH – Police in Paducah are asking for public assistance in finding a woman reported missing from her home.

The Paducah Sun reported (http://bit.ly/ZcHqqV) that 53-year-old Kathy Jean King was last seen at about 10:30 a.m. CDT Dec. 10 by her mother-in-law.

Police say King is described as white, 5-feet-1 and 127 pounds with a thin build with blue eyes and hair below shoulder-length. Family members told police that King is developmentally disabled.

Police have asked anyone with information to call 270-444-8550 or Crime Stoppers at 443-TELL (8355).

New church building open after March tornado

PAINTSVILLE, Ky. – Members of an eastern Kentucky church have held their first worship service in their new sanctuary, following a March tornado.

WYMT-TV in Hazard reported the congregation of Collista Freewill Baptist Church in Johnson County met Sunday in their new building. The previous structure in the Hagerhill community was destroyed by the spring storm.

Church members brought in the new pews and fastened them down on Saturday.

The rebuilding took about nine months and many congregation members said the building looks the same as it did before the tornado leveled it.

Latest mass shooting must be our last one

There is something wrong with us as a nation when 20 young children are massacred in their classroom — one in a long line of such travesties. It keeps happening, more often here than in any other supposedly civilized country in the world. And it has to stop.

What can anyone say? Perhaps we could turn around the oft-heard phrase "Guns don't kill people; people kill people" by acknowledging that so many people would not do so — and in such numbers — without the ready access to an assault rifle such as that the killer used.

We could discuss the difficulty of dealing with mental illness when patients have been turned out of facilities or forego treatment because of budget cuts or a refusal of a family (or an individual) to admit that there is a problem. Perhaps we could expand on that subject, bemoaning the continued (and wrong-minded) stigma/shame/denial of mental illness — and why it is so hard for average people to get (and afford) help when it is needed for themselves or a family member.

We could talk about evil.

Or hate.

Or anger.

Or fear.

Or we could ask this: What can we do today that might offer at least a small note of solace?

And we are stumped by our own question.

At the interfaith service Sunday evening in Newtown, Conn., President Barack Obama said he would use "whatever power this office holds" to engage with law enforcement, mental health professionals, parents and educators in an effort to prevent more tragedies.

"What choice do we have?" Obama said on a stage that held only a small table covered with a black cloth, candles and the presidential podium — and no other trappings of his office. "Are we really prepared to say that we're powerless in the face of such carnage, that the politics are too hard?"

The time will come — and soon — when we, as a nation, have to clearly define just what the Second Amendment means. We cannot delay asking why mental illness goes untreated and why these elements came together to so brutally attack an entire town's hopes for the future. And we must, in the depths of despair at what happened in a place where everyone felt so safe, find a way to keep the conversation civil and ongoing.

For if we don't do this now, inevitably we will have yet another tragedy to rage against, to report, to regret.

As the families of Newtown begin to bury their dead — the children and the adults who performed so bravely to protect them — we can be conscious of their sorrow, even in the midst of being lost in our own gratitude that our children are safe — at least for today.

In the coming days, as they continue the agonizing task of learning to cope with such loss, we can't simply say it must never happen again. We must find common ground to work harder than we ever have before to make sure it doesn't.

Yes, guns actually do kill people

JOHN M. CRISP
COLUMNIST

I considered writing a column about gun violence in our country on Dec. 1, the day that Kansas City Chiefs linebacker Javon Belcher killed his girlfriend with a handgun, and then, a few minutes later, committed suicide in front of the Chiefs' general manager and two of his coaches.

The next day, gun-rights advocates argued that the gun had nothing to do with this tragedy, that a powerful guy like Belcher could have killed his girlfriend with his bare hands or a baseball bat. In fact, one argued, a little more facetiously than the grim occasion warranted, that Belcher could have killed her with a "butter knife." Are we going to ban butter knives? Or ban automobiles because people sometimes die in them?

The argument is ridiculous, but I wrote nothing about it. Then on Dec. 10, a page of my local paper carried these three stories: In Cleveland, Ohio, a man killed his wife with a handgun and then killed himself. In Porterville, Calif., a man killed three people and wounded three children, including his two daughters. In Mercer, Pa., a 7-year-old was killed by a gun his father thought was unloaded.

The next day, Dec. 11, a gunman opened fire in a shopping mall in Portland, Ore., killing two people and wounding another. One would think that all this carnage is worth writing about. But stories like these are just business as usual in the United States, a nation awash with more than 310 million guns. According to the FBI, almost 48,000 people in the United States were murdered by firearms between 2006 and 2010. Including accidents and suicides, more than 30,000 people die every year from firearms. In the United States, there's nothing particularly remarkable about a man killing his wife or random strangers with a handgun.

No, it takes a dramatic event like the shooting that occurred in Newtown, Conn., on Dec. 14 to get our attention. Twenty-six people, including 20 children ages 6 to 7 years, were killed by a single shooter with high-powered, high-capacity, semiautomatic firearms. Some politicians and, certainly, gun-rights advocates argue that now isn't the time to politicize a tragedy by talking about laws and policies that permit a deranged man to obtain such potent weapons. They are wrong: The events in Newtown demand a serious discussion, now, about how we begin to protect ourselves and our children from firearm violence.

I'm no great fan of handguns, but I'm a strong supporter of the Second Amendment. Why? Because it's in the Constitution. Of course the amendment ties the keeping and bearing of arms to a "well regulated militia," but I won't quibble over the stretch that it takes to arrive at a citizen's right to own a firearm for hunting and for self-protection.

But the movie "Lincoln" includes a relevant scene: A besieged lawmaker pulls from his coat an unwieldy muzzle-loading pistol. His first shot is discharged harmlessly into the air, and his assailant has plenty of time to make an easy getaway while the lawmaker reloads, tediously ram-rodding down the barrel the powder, ball and wadding.

Such are the weapons that the Founding Fathers had in mind when the Second Amendment was enacted. Comanches could lay down fusillades of arrows with more accuracy and deadly effect than these primitive muzzle-loaders could. The Second Amendment doesn't imagine the concealable, high-capacity, higher-powered, semiautomatic weapons that make possible tragedies like Newtown, Conn.

In fact, massacres like these can't be committed with butter knives and baseball bats or even with reasonable weapons that can be used for self-defense and hunting. Mr. President, senators and representatives, the time has come. Muster the courage and will required to confront the gun lobby and to protect American children from more Newtown atrocities.

It's too late for 20 of our children; many of their names can be found beneath Connecticut Christmas trees, on presents that will never be opened.

Census report shows U.S. becoming more diverse

ANN McFEATTERS
COLUMNIST

We are not the same people we were, and the cultural and political ramifications are huge.

According to the Census Bureau, that collector of all things interesting about us, the November election that gave President Barack Obama a second term largely because he got 78 percent of the non-white vote was a precursor of things to come.

In 30 years, whites will no longer be a majority of the population. The population now is 315 million; in 38 years, there will be 400 million of us, but only 43 percent will be white compared with 63 percent today. In 1960, whites constituted 85 percent of U.S. residents.

Actually, population growth has slowed considerably; a few years ago, the Census said we would reach 400 million 12 years earlier than the demographers predict now. Not surprisingly, it's not just because of fertility rates; we are an aging population. By 2056, Americans over 65 will outnumber children under 18 for the first time in U.S. history.

This means fewer working adults will pay those pesky Social Security and Medicare taxes. Also, Americans 85 and older will triple to 18.2 million, making up 4 percent of the entire population.

It's now easier to see why neither Capitol Hill Republicans nor White House officials want to make the first move toward outlining specific details on how to limit Social Security and Medicare benefits.

By 2060, Hispanic Americans will account for almost one of every three people living in the United States. Watch for this trend to have a major impact on language, food, music, education and values before the amazing American assimilation machine does its magic.

The demographic shift is probably the single largest reason Mitt Romney lost the election. He won white votes by a 20 percent margin, but unlike in previous elections, that was no longer enough to win the White House.

Romney's hapless struggles to find a message that resonated with Hispanics emphasized how out of step the Republican Party has become with the changing demographics of the country. Here's betting that we will see a far different election fight in 2016 unless Republicans decide to completely self-destruct.

As children of immigrants become the fastest-growing demographic, the pressure on educators and politicians who fund education will be enormous. We must do a better job of making certain those children have the skills to compete in a world in which U.S. academic achievement is slipping dramatically.

Other minority groups are gaining ground as well. By 2060, as Hispanics make up 31 percent of the population, blacks will increase to 14.7 percent. Asians will increase to 8 percent, up from 5 percent.

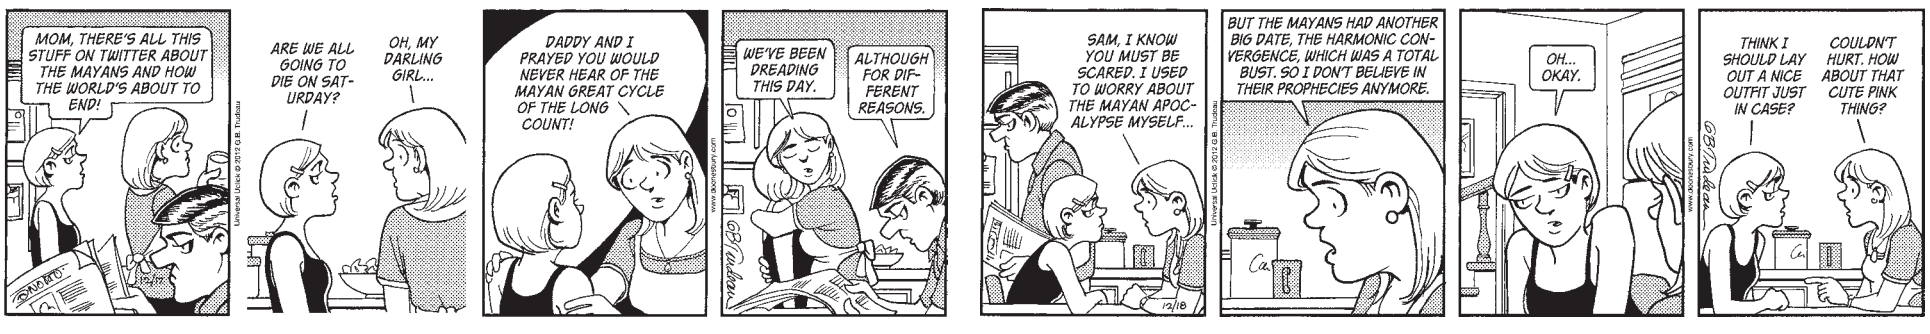

Minority children will become the majority of children far sooner — in 2019. In 2011, racial and ethnic minorities became a majority among babies ages 1 and younger for the first time.

Speaking of the young, here's another Census Bureau observation. Young Americans are moving again. That trend slowed to near-record lows during the recession, which is bad because it contributes to economic stagnation. If young Americans are leaving home to start fresh someplace else, that's good news and not just for their empty-nest parents.

American history has shown constant change, which may be difficult for some but is necessary. For example, 2012 was the year when a majority of Americans first supported civil rights for gays and lesbians. It also took decades before we embraced the vote for women and civil rights for black Americans. But we did, and we are a far better people for it.

The emerging demographic changes will make us more diverse and, if we are smart, better and stronger.

Scott is named S.C. senator

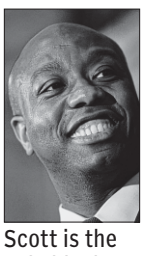

■ He is first black GOP to fill post in decades

By Seanna Adcox
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. – Gov. Nikki Haley appointed Rep. Tim Scott to the U.S. Senate on Monday, making him the South's first black Republican senator since Reconstruction in a state whose politics is steeped in the history of slavery and Civil War.

"It speaks to the evolution of South Carolina and our nation," Scott, 47, said of his appointment to fill the seat vacated by Sen. Jim DeMint, a conservative who resigned his post with four years left in his second term to head a right-leaning think tank.

Haley, a daughter of Indian immigrants who became South Carolina's first female and minority governor in 2010, acknowledged making history with her appointment, but she stressed that she picked Scott for his conservative values.

Scott is the only black Republican in Congress.

"He earned this seat for what I know he's going to do in making South Carolina and our country proud," she said.

Scott, 47, will be sworn in Jan. 3. Senate Republicans welcomed the appointment, which comes more than a month after poor performance with minorities forced soul-searching to broaden its appeal.

He'll become only the fourth black Republican in Senate history and the only black Republican in Congress, after Rep. Allen West, of Florida, lost his re-election bid last month.

Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., one of two Hispanics in the Senate, called Scott "a passionate, thoughtful and sincere advocate for the people of South Carolina and for limited government principles."

Scott will serve for two years and faces election in November 2014. "I have no doubt he'll fly through 2014," Haley said.

Scott said he believes in term limits and would likely limit himself to two terms.

Scott grew up in poverty in North Charleston. His parents divorced when he was 7, and he remembered his mom working 16 hours a day.

"To the single moms out there, don't give up on your kids. It may get tough. It may be challenging, but all things are truly possible," he said.

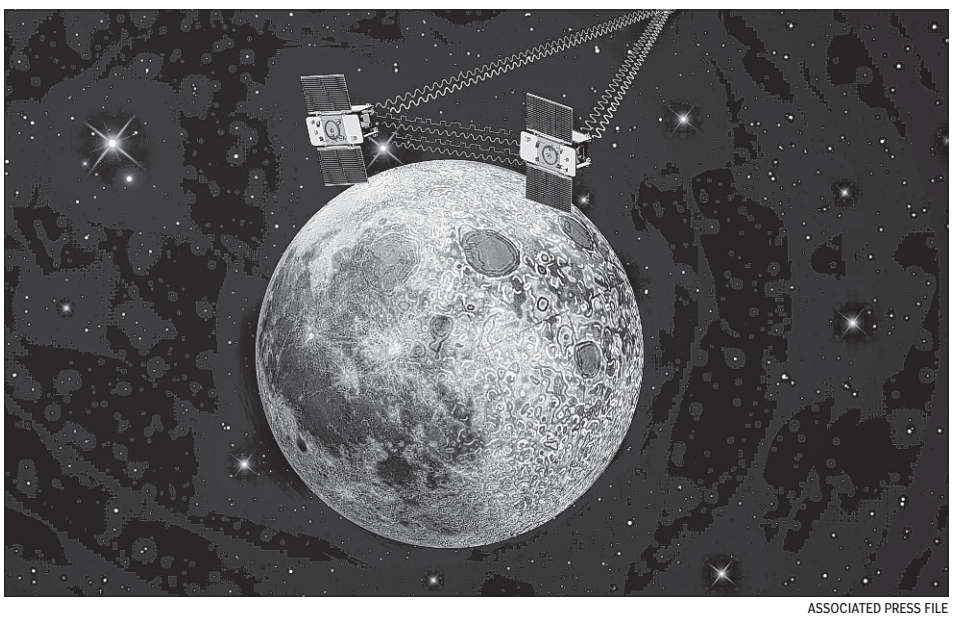

Spacecraft crash from lunar orbit, hit surface

■ Ebb, Flow site named for late Sally Ride

By Alicia Chang
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. – A pair of NASA spacecraft tumbled out of orbit around the moon and crashed back-to-back into the surface on Monday, ending a mission that peered into the lunar interior.

Engineers commanded the twin spacecraft, Ebb and Flow, to fire their engines and burn their remaining fuel. Ebb plunged first, slamming into a mountain near the moon's north pole. Its twin, Flow, followed about a half-minute later and aimed for the same target.

ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

This artist rendering shows the twin Grail spacecraft mapping the lunar gravity field. After nearly a year circling the moon, NASA's Ebb and Flow spacecraft met their demise in the same month as the 40th launch anniversary of Apollo 17, the last manned mission to the moon.

By design, the final resting place was far away from the Apollo landing sites and other historical spots.

After the double impacts, mission chief scientist Maria Zuber of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said the spot has been named after team member Sally Ride, the first American woman in space.

Since the crash site was in darkness, the final act was not visible from Earth. The Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter circling the moon will pass over the mountain and attempt to photograph the skid marks left as they hit the surface at 3,800 mph.

After rocketing off the launchpad in September 2011, Ebb and Flow took a roundabout journey to the moon, arriving over the New Year's holiday on a gravity-mapping mission.

Ebb and Flow focused exclusively on measuring the gravity field in a bid to learn more about its interior and early history. After flying in formation for months, they produced the most detailed gravity maps of any body in the solar system.

Man who killed two cops is shot to death

TOPEKA – A man with a history of theft and weapons convictions gunned down two police officers investigating possible drug activity in a parking lot, and was later killed after an armed standoff.

Kyle Smith, of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation, identified the man who opened fire on Cpl. David Gogian, 50, and Officer Jeff Atherly, 29, on Sunday night as David Tiscareno, 22.

Shawnee County Sheriff Herman Jones said Tiscareno was seated in a car stopped in the parking lot of a grocery store when police ordered the occupants to get out. After shooting two of the three responding officers, Tiscareno drove from the scene. The third officer returned fire.

Authorities found Tiscareno holed up early Monday at a house about a mile away. When negotiations broke down, KBI agents fired tear gas inside. Tiscareno then emerged from the home with a gun, and officers opened fire.

OHIO

Governor spares obese killer

COLUMBUS – The governor on Monday sidestepped a decision about whether a condemned inmate was too fat to be humanely executed by sparing the prisoner on the grounds that he had poor legal representation.

Gov. John Kasich's decision to grant clemency to Ronald Post mirrored the recommendation of mercy by the state parole board, which said it didn't doubt Post's guilt but said there were too many problems with how he was represented 30 years ago.

Post, who weighs 450 pounds, never raised the issue of his size with the board. Kasich commuted Post's sentence to life with no chance of parole. Post was scheduled to die Jan. 16 for killing Elyria motel clerk Helen Vantz in a 1983 robbery.

Defense: Madoff will be 'pariah'

NEW YORK – A defense lawyer says the brother of imprisoned Wall Street financier Bernard Madoff will be left penniless and spend his remaining days as a "jobless pariah" in or out of prison.

Attorney John Wing made the observations in a sentencing memorandum made public Monday, three days before Peter Madoff is to be sentenced in New York for his role in a fraud that cheated thousands of people out of $20 billion.

Census to offer Internet surveys

WASHINGTON – For the first time, the Census Bureau is giving households a chance to respond to government surveys over the Internet, part of a bid to save costs in a digital age.

The new online option will supplement the traditional census mail-out operation.

It is a major shift for the agency, which has relied almost exclusively on paper forms since 1970 but is now moving toward a more Internet-based system after spending a record $13 billion on the 2010 census.

"The online response option is part of an ongoing digital transformation at the Census Bureau," said Thomas Mesenbourg, the Bureau's acting director.

Vice president seeks deal with rebels

Syria's vice president has acknowledged that the army cannot defeat the rebel forces trying to topple the regime and called for a negotiated settlement to save the country from ruin.

The rare, candid comments by Farouk al-Sharaa, a longtime close aide to President Bashar Assad's family, suggested his embattled regime may be contemplating an exit strategy as rebel forces move closer to the capital Damascus. He spoke in an interview published Monday by Lebanese newspaper Al-Akhbar.

IRAQ

At least 25 killed in wave of bombings

BAGHDAD — A wave of bombings hit ethnically disputed northern areas and other parts of Iraq on Monday, killing 25 people and wounding dozens.

The attacks deepen fears that militants are seeking to reignite ethnic and sectarian violence in the country, where tensions remain high over areas contested between the central government and Kurdish minority. Deadly violence also continues between the country's two dominant sects — Sunni and Shiite Muslims.

The deadliest of Monday's attacks took place in al-Mouafaqiyah, a village inhabited by families from the Shabak ethnic group.

Seven people were killed and 11 were wounded in the bombing, according to police officials.

Elsewhere in the north, two car bombs went off in a majority Turkomen neighborhood in the city of Tuz Khormato, killing five people and wounding 26, said Mohammed al-Asi, a spokesman for Salahuddin provincial council.

PAKISTAN

At least 17 killed in car bombing

PESHAWAR – A car bomb exploded in a crowded market in Pakistan's troubled northwest tribal region near the Afghan border Monday, killing 17 people and wounding more than 40 others, officials said.

The bomb went off near the women's waiting area of a bus stop close to the office of one of the Khyber tribal area's top political officials, said Hidayat Khan, a local government official. It was unclear if the office was the target, he added. The 17 dead included five boys and two women, said Abdul Qudoos, a doctor at a hospital in Jamrud town, where the attack occurred.

At least 44 people were wounded, he said.

ISRAEL

Building plans set for east Jerusalem

JERUSALEM – Israel on Monday said it was pushing forward with plans to build hundreds of homes in a Jewish settlement of east Jerusalem, risking renewed tensions with the Palestinians and its Western allies over the contentious project.

The announcement was part of a new Israeli settlement push announced earlier this month as retaliation for the Palestinians' success in winning U.N. recognition for a state at the United Nations. Israel was widely criticized internationally for the settlement plans, though actual construction would be far in the future.

Egypt's low turnout to vote casts doubt on new charter

■ Endorsement too weak to silence critics

By Hamza Hendawi
Associated Press

CAIRO – Just under a third of voters turned out for the first stage of the referendum on a constitution meant to be a historic milestone in setting Egypt's future, a showing critics say deepens doubts over the legitimacy of a charter that has already polarized the country.

The dismal showing also raises the question whether Egyptians have been turned off by the turmoil that has characterized the country's politics throughout the nearly two years since the ouster of Hosni Mubarak's autocratic regime.

Last Saturday's voting took place in 10 of Egypt's 27 provinces, including Cairo and the nation's second largest city Alexandria. Some 26 million voters were eligible to vote, but only 32 percent of them did. Voting in the remainder 17 provinces will take place Saturday.

The turnout was the second lowest of the relentless series of five nationwide elections that Egyptians have been called to in the 22 months since Mubarak's fall in last year's popular uprising. The highest was nearly 60 percent in the election of parliament's lawmaking lower chamber. The lowest was an embarrassing 8 percent for the vote for the upper chamber, a largely toothless body that the public cares little about.

Besides the low turnout, preliminary results show that the "yes" vote carried the first round only by a slim margin of 56 percent, hardly the resounding endorsement the Islamists were looking for to silence the increasingly vocal and united opposition that called on supporters to vote "no."

For weeks, legal experts in Egypt have said if turnout is low and the final majority in favor of the constitution is lower than 70 percent, it would raise damaging questions about how representative the document is of the nation.

But a spokesman for Islamist President Mohammed Morsi dismissed any talk of thresholds.

"The new constitution will be adopted and go into effect if the result of the referendum is 50 plus 1 percent of votes," said Yasser Ali. "This is what is in the election law and it has not been changed."

Sabotage blamed in Bangladesh deadly fire

■ Blaze killed 112 people at garment factory

By Julhas Alam
Associated Press

DHAKA, Bangladesh – A Bangladesh government committee investigating the garment factory fire that killed 112 people last month said in its findings Monday that the blaze was sabotage, probably by someone who worked there.

But the panel said that no matter who set the fire, the owner of the factory also should be punished for the deaths because he neglected worker safety.

"If someone is responsible for such a huge number of deaths, that's him. He has failed to ensure safety," committee head Mainuddin Khandaker said of factory owner Delwar Hossain.

Some government and garment industry officials had alleged soon after the Nov. 24 fire that it was an act of sabotage, though a fire official said casualties would have been greatly reduced if the factory had followed safety rules.

The factory lacked emergency exits, and Hossain has said only three floors of the eight-story building were legally built. Surviving employees said gates had been locked and managers had told them to go back to work after the fire alarm went off.

The four-member committee submitted its report to the government Monday. At least two other investigations are continuing.

UPS design lab puts boxes, packages to the smash test

By Carla K. Johnson
Associated Press

ADDISON, Ill. – It looks like a torture chamber for cardboard and bubble wrap. At a lab in suburban Chicago, UPS Inc. tests new packaging designs by dropping, shaking and smashing boxes with brutal-looking equipment. The point is to see what type of packaging can withstand the trip from supplier to customer, protecting the delicate products inside.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Holiday decorations that survived repeated drops of an impact tester at the UPS Package Design and Testing Lab are seen in Addison, Ill. UPS tests new packaging designs by dropping, shaking and smashing boxes with brutal-looking equipment to see what type of packaging can withstand the trip from supplier to customer, protecting the delicate products inside.

UPS packaging engineer Preeti Agrawal tests a packed box using a drop impact tester that simulates a box traveling through the small parcel system at the UPS Package Design and Testing Lab in Addison, Ill.

From cupcakes to live crickets, products of a mind-boggling variety are now shipped by online retailers to consumers around the world. As the holiday shipping season throttles up, companies want their products to arrive safely. But they also demand sustainable materials for their packaging so they can boast of being green. On top of that, they want to reduce their costs.

The UPS Package Design and Testing Lab helps with all that, crunching and squeezing prototype packaging for 750 businesses a year and designing innovative new boxes for an additional 50 customers.

Men's suits arriving at the store wrinkled? That's a job for UPS' Quint Marini and his team of eight packaging engineers. Their new design for a perfect suit box solved the problem by layering 10 suits on hangers in alternate directions and keeping them in place with a built-in strap.

"It took us five months," Marini said. "First we were going to put each suit on a piece of corrugated (cardboard) and tag it to it. That didn't work. Then someone came up with this design. But it took three months to make sure."

Boxes to protect fragile frosting on cupcakes, to keep cheesecakes cold, to keep pharmaceuticals at room temperature — Marini's team has designed them. Their busiest time is summer when companies get ready to launch new products.

A typical testing workout takes four hours. Boxes get a 900-pound hug from the compression table. They crash 17 times from the drop tester. They endure the crudity of the bridge impact tester, which slams into them from the sky like a karate chop. They shake for two hours on the vibration table, which mimics a bumpy truck ride. The altitude chamber simulates flight conditions; it can explode bag of potato chips.

To demonstrate a typical test, packaging engineer Kyle Blakey switches on a pneumatic compression table. A box withstands 900 pounds of force, but eventually the box buckles under an iron plate when Blakey turns the force up to 2,000 pounds.

Other shipping companies, including FedEx Corp., have similar labs.

Marini gets some odd requests.

One supplier of reptile foods wanted to ship dead rats and live crickets in the same truck. Marini advised against it: The dry ice needed to keep the rats from decomposing would have suffocated the crickets.

Marini has some tips for people packing breakable holiday gifts:

- Start with a new box.
- Fill partway with foam packing peanuts.
- Place a piece of corrugated cardboard on top of the foam peanuts.
- Wrap the gift items in bubble wrap. Place them in a snug layer on top of the cardboard platform. There shouldn't be too much give or extra space.
- Place another piece of corrugated cardboard on top of that.
- Add more packing peanuts a little higher than the brim.

Close the box and use packing tape on all the seams.

Marini packed just such a box recently in the lab and had his crew drop it repeatedly from the drop tester. The ornaments and snow globe he packed inside survived perfectly.

Smartphones can soon be used to 'e-hail' New York taxis

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK – Raising your arm and yelling "taxi!" is the old-fashioned way to nab a New York City cab. Soon, all you'll need is a smartphone app.

New York City's Taxi and Limousine Commission on Thursday approved a pilot program allowing riders to "e-hail" yellow cabs, starting Feb. 15 on a test basis. Until now, the city has banned yellow taxis from prearranging rides.

"We should not ignore technology that's out there. This is not speculative, this is real," Commissioner David Yassky said.

The commission issued a news release after the vote celebrating what it called "appy days ahead."

The system will be tried out for one year. After the free apps start linking customers with drivers in mid-February, the commission will produce quarterly reports on the program's success, leading to a decision on whether to extend it.

At least a dozen companies are ready to provide the service, including ones now operating in other U.S. cities and overseas. London has a thriving taxi e-hail system.

A group of cabbies attended the commission hearing. One later addressed the issue of customers who still want to hail a cab the traditional way — by standing in the street and waving — and who might worry that cabbies will pass them by.

"If I accept an e-hail, I won't stop for a person on the street," acknowledged driver Mohammad Butt, 35, a Staten Island resident. "But if I have a passenger in the car now, I don't stop, either."

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A woman gets into a taxi outside Penn Station in New York. Last week, New York City's Taxi & Limousine Commission approved a plan that will allow riders to "e-hail" yellow cabs using their smart phones. The plan will start a year long test on Feb. 15, 2013.

On the other hand, driver Antonio Clark said the smartphone hail will make getting a cab easier at night in neighborhoods where they're not easily available.

"You don't have to stand on a dark, empty street," said Clark, 30, of Brooklyn. "You can wait inside an entrance, because the driver has your address."

Jerry Corraya, 23, is a fan of the new service because he lives in Queens, "where it's hard to get a cab."

Besides, "the world is moving fast, and we have to go with it," said Corraya, who works at a pastry stand in Penn Station.

Commission research showed drivers still prefer to pick up gesturing passengers, Yassky said.

"They'll still tend to pick up a ride that's there first," he said. "I think drivers will use the app when there's no passenger out there."

Here's how it works. A potential fare uses the app to request a ride. That request goes out to all participating cabbies within a certain distance, and the cabbie who uses his or her own cellphone to respond first will get the fare.

City law prohibits drivers from talking on handheld cellphones, but they will be able to use them to respond to an e-hail.

The electronic system is optional for cab companies. Mensah Kwabenah, a cabbie waiting for customers near Penn Station, said he'll respond to app hails if his cab owner wants him to.

The 56-year-old driver said that personally, he felt checking his phone for a customer's location "is going to be a distraction, and it could cause accidents" — even if the cell phone is mounted.

The commission was subject to lobbying from the service car industry, which fears loss of business if yellow cabs are allowed to prearrange rides.

The commissioner said the city will make sure both drivers and customers are protected. The driver should be able to accept a ride with a single touch after receiving a passenger signal, Yassky said.

Distance limits will be built into the technology. For example, from 59th Street to Battery Park in Manhattan — the primary business zone — yellow cabs will be allowed to respond to an electronic hail within a half-mile. Elsewhere in the city, the limit is a mile and a half.

Customers may pay by using apps that interact with the technology being used in a particular yellow cab, according to TLC spokesman Allan Fromberg.

Lynn Janczak, waiting for a cab in front of Penn Station, prefers to keep things simple.

A former New York resident who lives in West Hartford, Conn., and works in marketing, she's well-equipped for stopping cabs in the city — by carrying a yellow mitt on a stick marked with the word "taxi."

"No, I'm not going to e-hail, because I think we're already too dependent on electronics," she declared, adding that it won't bother her if a cab passes her for an e-hail.

Plus, she said, her mitt "really works."

Fossil hunting is a family affair

By John Faherty
The Kentucky Enquirer

COVINGTON, Ky. – It does not look like much, this building near the railroad tracks and the massive old gas tanks in Northern Kentucky.

But inside, ancient history is being revealed. Fossils hundreds of millions of years old emerge from shale and limestone and are born again in their bizarre beauty.

These ancient creatures are trilobites, an underwater invertebrate that had a hard outer shell and went extinct before dinosaurs walked the earth. During the Ordovician Period of the Paleozoic Era, trilobites used to populate the ocean floor in what is now Ohio. That was about 440 million years ago.

If trilobites have a cousin in today's world, it would be a lobster or a horseshoe crab, although they were typically smaller.

These fossils end up in Covington because of the work of three men, the Cooper brothers and their dad, who research the fossils, find them and then extract them from their stone graves. The men then sell the fossils to collectors or give them to museums for the world to see. They have pieces at the Smithsonian and the Museum of Natural History & Science at the Cincinnati Museum Center.

The Cooper men are perfectly suited for this peculiar endeavor. Each has different talents, and all work toward a common goal.

Jason Cooper, 36, is an outdoorsman who likes to work in the field digging the fossils up. Ben Cooper, 34, is a father and husband with more of an artist's sensibility. He spends most of his time in the lab turning the fossils into works of art. The brothers have been doing this as a business full-time for five years.

Dan Cooper, 60, their father, is a recently retired aerospace engineer who likes to do a little of everything. He likes to investigate where the trilobites might be found and to prepare the land for a fossil hunt. He has decades of experience.

In 1985, when the state of Ohio named the trilobite the official Ohio fossil, officials went to Dan for a good sample. The whole fossil community had told Ohio officials he would have the best.

Today this family is running what Dan calls "probably the largest invertebrate fossil prep lab in the world."

Then he pauses for a moment and tries to think of how many there might be. "We may be the only large invertebrate prep lab in the world."

Fossil hunting is a Cooper family affair

The Cooper family's interest in these ancient fossils actually started a generation earlier, in the early 1960s, when Dan's father, Don, was out in Monroe, and a man told him that a local field was known for having fossils.

Don was not particularly interested, but when he went home he told his wife, who went by Lou, about the trilobites. Lou wanted to head right back out to look for them.

Dan still has the first one that his parents found. And his passion was born as soon as he was old enough to hunt for them on his own.

As he grew older, in his spare time he would research places where trilobites might be found.

Dan said geologists from Ohio and other states used to survey land, often looking for places where coal might be found.

But their field notes, dating back to the 1800s, would include everything they saw, including trilobite fossils, which are sometimes visible along the top of a rock.

When they find land that might be right, Dan or Jason will talk to the owner about leasing it. Sometimes the Coopers will buy land, but they know that even with all of their research fossil hunting is still speculative. Leasing is better.

A run-of-the-mill fossil, small and incomplete or damaged, might sell for $10. A beautiful sample, rare and large and perfectly restored, with many hours of labor associated with it, could sell for $10,000 or more.

There are high-end collectors and simple enthusiasts. There are people who love the art and the history and the work that goes into a restored trilobite and people who simply want to hold something in their hand that lived on the bottom of an ocean a few hundred million years ago.

And for the Coopers, providing these ancient creatures allows them to do what they love best and find most interesting.

The Digestion Miracle Pill

If you're tortured by acid reflux, gas, heartburn, indigestion, constipation, diarrhea, stomach pain, bloating, or other digestion problems... now there's good news!

By Kenneth Wesmeyer
Freelance Health Writer

Recently, a leading scientist revealed to the world; a digestion pill, containing an ingredient that could change the lives of millions. If you worry about what you eat or how bad you'll feel afterward... Now your problems may be over at last!

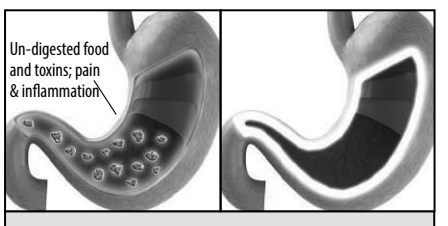

Danish Pharmacist Dr. Jens Van Nielsen

The ingredient is called Bee Propolis. And the results are so spectacular; they've shocked doctors and scientists worldwide. According to Dr. Jens Van Nielsen, a leading medical researcher and widely-respected pharmacist…

"Until now, people relied on products like probiotics and colon cleansers to help deal with digestion pain and discomfort. Unfortunately, they just do part of the job. That's because these remedies take action only 'after' you eat."

Here's How it Works; Bee Propolis is found on the inner walls of a beehive. Its main function is to stop germs and bacteria from weakening the hives cellular structure. It works in your stomach the same way.

Bee Propolis sets up your stomach lining to "search and destroy" bad bacteria before it attacks. So micro-organisms that manage to get through are quickly expelled from your body. Diarrhea, constipation, acid regurgitation, gas and other related disorders seem to disappear. But in truth, they never really get a chance to start. But here's the problem

WITHOUT Gastro Guardian:	WITH Gastro Guardian:
Bacteria and harmful toxins react with partially-digested food— causing inflamed stomach linings and horrible indigestion pain.	A protective lining on your stomach prevents food from reacting with bacteria and toxins NO MORE PAIN!!

RARE AND IN DEMAND

Bee Propolis is hard to come by and in short supply. But according to folklore, a bountiful supply exists in wild bee hives, somewhere in the South American jungle.

So in March, 2005, an expedition, led by Mr. Alessandro Esteves, set out to find the rare compound. His exploration took him to a remote region in Alagoas, Brazil. The journey was treacherous. But the need to help millions that suffer with digestion problems inspired the team to go on… no matter how impossible the journey seemed at times.

But after disrupting hundreds of angry beehives, they stumbled upon the mother lode: acres and acres of Red Bee Propolis, the most potent form of Bee Propolis.

NO PRESCRIPTION NEEDED!

Thanks to Mr. Esteves, the digestion miracle is now available in the USA. And it's on course to change the face of medicine forever.

People are rejoicing about the abundant supply of Bee Propolis now available to digestion sufferers in the USA. But the truth is, you can't find it just anywhere. The Amazonian goldmine is used only in a new formulation called Gastro Guardian™.

94% SUCCESS RATE

Gastro Guardian™ contains a whopping 25 mg of a special Bee Propolis blend, the only such formula with Bee Propolis on the market. A 1985 study found that over 94% of people who took 1-2 tablets "experienced fast relief." Even from those with unbearably painful bouts of acid reflux.

AVAILABLE FOR 30 + YEARS WITHOUT SIDE EFFECTS!

Originally sold in Scandinavia and Europe under a different brand, Gastro Guardian™ has given a whole new life to people who've been tortured by digestion problems for almost 40 years. And remarkably there's never been one occurrence of negative side effects. That's pretty impressive considering how many people have used this amazing formula since 1974. Now, digestion sufferers in the USA can experience the same relief at last!

NO PRESCRIPTION NEEDED!

Thousands swear by it in Europe. Now, it's finally available here in the USA!

HERE'S WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING ABOUT GASTRO GUARDIAN™

"I had to rush to the toilet 10-20 times a day. It was horrible. At first, all I did was take 3 capsules a day with incredible results. Now, I only take 1 or 2 capsules a day when needed."
– Lois A., California

"For embarrassing digestive problems, I took a capsule with every meal for six months and now it's all OK. Today I only use 1 capsule a day."
– Mike C., Florida

"I took a capsule with every meal for an irritable colon. Now I take only one capsule a day. Been taking it for 9 years."
- Brenda J., Georgia

It's a fact; your digestive problems might seem minor today, but some studies indicate they will get worse. Simply take Gastro Guardian™ daily and you'll be able to enjoy eating again… no matter how spicy or rich. You'll finally be able to eat the way you used to — without being tortured by your digestive system.

the next few days, just as other towns are getting ready for the holidays.

"I feel like we have to get back to normal, but I don't know if there is normal anymore," said Kim Camputo, mother of two children, 5 and 10, who attend a different school. "I'll definitely be dropping them off and picking them up myself for a while."

Beyond Newtown, parents nervously sent their children back to class in a country deeply shaken by the attack, and in a measure of how the tragedy has put people on edge, schools were locked down in at least four places.

As investigators worked to figure out what drove Lanza to lash out with such fury — and why he singled out the school — federal agents said he had fired guns at shooting ranges over the past several years but there was no evidence he did so recently as practice for the rampage.

At Jack's Christian service, hymns rang out from inside the funeral home, where the boy lay in an open casket. Jack was among the youngest members of a youth wrestling association in Newtown, and dozens of little boys turned up at the service in gray Newtown Wrestling T-shirts.

Ten-year-old Luke Wellman remembered a boy who loved football and wrestling and worshipped Victor Cruz, the star wide receiver for the Giants. Cruz played in Sunday's game with "Jack Pinto 'My Hero' " written on one of his cleats.

Luke said: "I'm here to support my teammate and friend."

The funeral program bore a quotation from the Book of Revelation: "God shall wipe away all tears. There shall be no more death. Neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

A mourner, Gwendolyn Glover, said the service carried a message of comfort and protection, particularly for other children. "The message was: You're secure now. The worst is over," she said.

At both funeral homes, as around the country, people wrestled with what steps could and should be taken to prevent something like the massacre from happening again.

"If people want to go hunting, a single-shot rifle does the job, and that does the job to protect your home, too. If you need more than that, I don't know what to say," Ray DiStephan said outside Noah's funeral.

He added: "I don't want to see my kids go to schools that become maximum-security fortresses. That's not the world I want to live in, and that's not the world I want to raise them in."

Around the country, school systems asked police departments to increase patrols Monday and sent messages to parents outlining safety procedures. Teachers steeled themselves for their students' questions and fears.

Anxiety ran high enough in Ridgefield, Conn., about 20 miles from Newtown, that officials ordered a lockdown at schools after a person deemed suspicious was seen at a train station. Two schools were locked down in South Burlington, Vt., because of an unspecified threat.

Three schools in the Tampa, Fla., area did the same after a bullet was found on the floor of a school bus, and a New Hampshire high school went into emergency mode after an administrator heard a loud bang. A police search found nothing suspicious.

Meanwhile, the outlines of a national debate on gun control began to take shape. At the White House, spokesman Jay Carney said curbing gun violence is a complex problem that will require a "comprehensive solution."

Carney did not offer specific proposals or a timeline. He said President Barack Obama will meet with law enforcement officials and mental health professionals in coming weeks.

At least one senator, Democrat Mark Warner of Virginia, said Monday that the attack in Newtown has led him to rethink his opposition to the ban on assault weapons.

In Newtown, classes were canceled Monday, and the town's other schools were to reopen today. The district made plans to send surviving Sandy Hook students to a former middle school in the neighboring town of Monroe.

Sandy Hook desks are being taken to the Chalk Hill school in Monroe, empty since town schools consolidated last year, and tradesmen are donating their services to get the school ready within a matter of days.

"These are innocent children that need to be put on the right path again," Monroe police Lt. Brian McCauley said.

MURDERS
from 1A

The Scripps study found 29 incidents of mass murder in 2010, the most recent year for which complete data are available. That was down from 37 cases in 2009 and 32 cases in 2008.

The rate also held steady for multiple homicides — involving two or more deaths — which average about 652 cases a year. In 2010, there were 672 killings of at least two people, down from the 737 such cases reported in 2009.

This steady drumbeat of multiple murders stands in stark contrast to a dramatic decline in all homicides. A significant reduction in fatal domestic violence and other disputes between acquaintances has dropped the homicide count from an all-time high of 24,703 in 1991 to 12,706 in 2011, according to the latest U.S. Justice Department estimates.

The Scripps study found that 73 percent of all mass murders were committed by males, 6 percent by females and 21 percent by people of unknown gender because police did not catch them.

Mass murderers are considerably more likely to be white males than are killers in general. Sixty percent of mass murders are committed by whites, compared to 49 percent of all killings. Blacks are responsible for 36 percent of mass killings, but for 49 percent of all homicides. People of other races account for 4 percent of mass killings and 2 percent of all homicides. Mass killings usually involve firearms, especially handguns and rifles, or acts of arson, which also can kill large numbers of victims. Single-victim murders also frequently involve firearms, though a significant number involve knives or so-called "personal weapons" such as a killer's hands for strangulation or beating.

Generally, mass killers do not personally know their victims. Single-victim killers are more likely than mass killers to take the lives of their friends, acquaintances, wives and girlfriends, often during arguments.

But mass killers sometimes include family members among their victims. They are more likely than most murderers to take the lives of their mothers, fathers, sons or daughters. As with last week's Connecticut case, mass killers included their mothers among their victims in at least eight other cases since 1980.

OVERLAY

and requiring 10-digit local dialing. An overlay was favored by a 4-to-1 margin by the 203 people who submitted comments to the PSC.

"I feel our prayers were answered," Susie Givens, president of Givens International Drilling Supplies Inc. near Corydon, which sells drill bits and related products to the construction, water well and mineral extraction industries around the world.

Based on her experiences following the 1999 area code split, Givens feared that she would lose business from old customers who might not know that her area code had changed.

"Public opinion has shifted dramatically in the six years since the PSC last considered this matter," PSC Chairman David Armstrong said in a statement. "It appears that the public is much less concerned about 10-digit dialing than about the possibility of having to change phone numbers."

Changing area codes was a particular concern to business people, who noted that they would have to change business cards, brochures, letterheads, websites and other materials.

An overlay was also favored by the telecommunications industry, which said it would be technically easier to implement than another area code split.

The PSC said overlays have been used in 23 of the last 24 area codes created across the country.

Armstrong noted that Kentuckians will have more than a year to prepare for the transition.

The PSC was formally notified in April of the need for a new area code in western Kentucky by the North American Numbering Plan Administrator (NANPA), the agency that distributes blocks of phone numbers to providers and tracks number exhaustion in area codes.

NANPA initially said a new area code would be needed in early 2015, but later revised that projection to early 2014.

Under the PSC's order on Monday, telecommunication providers must begin preparing their networks for the change no later than Feb. 2, 2013.

Landline and wireless phone providers also are required to prepare customer education plans.

Starting Aug. 3, 2013, consumers will be able to place local calls with either seven-digit or 10-digit dialing. That so-called "permissive dialing period" will allow people to transition into 10-digit dialing as well as provide an opportunity for private telephone systems to be reprogrammed and tested in preparation for mandatory 10-digit dialing.

Mandatory 10-digit dialing will go into effect on Feb. 1, 2014. At that point, local calls using the current seven-digit dialing rules will no longer be connected.

The first phone numbers using area code 364 may be assigned beginning March 3, 2014. Area code 270 numbers can also be assigned after that date, but their availability will depend on how many remain in the inventory of each phone company.

Meanwhile, PSC staff will be available to make presentations to local governments, chambers of commerce, civic groups and other organizations. To schedule a presentation, contact Andrew Melnykovych, public information officer for the PSC, at (502) 564-3940.

All records in the case are available on the PSC website, psc.ky.gov. The case number is 2012-00129.

CODE

dialing will be required for all local calls within the overlay.

■ Ten-digit dialing means dialing the area code before dialing the number itself — for example: 270-555-1212 or 364-555-1212.

■ Ten-digit dialing also will be required for local calls into or out of the overlay in those areas that now allow seven-digit local calling across the area code 270 boundary into a neighboring area code (such as in Paducah and Fulton).

■ Long-distance calls within the overlay — for example, a call from Henderson to Morganfield — will require 11-digit (1-plus) dialing, just as long-distance calls to other area codes do now.

■ A transition period, known as permissive dialing, will begin on Aug. 3, 2013, and end on Jan. 31, 2014. During that time, local calls can be made using either seven-digit or 10-digit dialing.

■ On Feb. 1, 2014, 10-digit dialing for local calls will become mandatory in the area code 270/364 territory.

■ Numbers with area code 364 may be distributed beginning March 3, 2014. Telecommunication service providers may continue to distribute 270 numbers for as long as they have any remaining in their inventories.

a lot of positives to it," said Daigle, noting that it is only the second year of a 10-year program to poll the students. The district overall improved, he said, although some individual schools showed drops in their scores.

And even topics that showed improvement are still "areas of concern," he said.

Only 57 percent of kids understand what it takes to get good grades, and only 43 percent have goals they are pursuing.

Superintendent Thomas Richey said the poll results are important in identifying trends. "It's good information and I hope that we'll be able to put some of it on the Web so the parents can have a look at this as well."

Other matters before the school board Monday evening included:

Bass fishing: Student J.D. Larew made a proposal to start a school-sanctioned bass fishing team at Henderson County High School, saying it would help students with science, math and language arts skills. The team would involve more students in a school activity, and could raise its own money and provide its own insurance. "Students are involved in something more than playing on their video games or their computer."

School calendar: The board voted to approve the 2013-14 school calendar that shows school starting Aug. 7 and May 20 as last day for students. Graduation will be May 23. Hunsaker voted against it because he said he had concerns about the way it could affect businesses.

Obama gives ground in budget talks

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama has agreed to curtail future cost-of-living increases for recipients of Social Security and softened his demand for higher taxes at upper income levels as part of accelerating talks with House Speaker John Boehner to avoid a "fiscal cliff," people familiar with the talks said Monday.

Speaking a few hours after Obama and Boehner met at the White House, these people said the president was now seeking higher tax rates beginning at incomes over $400,000 for couples, down from the $250,000 level that was a cornerstone of his successful campaign for re-election.

Obama's willingness to reduce future cost-of-living increases in Social Security and numerous other government programs marked a clear a concession to Boehner, although it came with an asterisk. The president wants lower-income recipients to receive protection against any loss from scaling back future cost of living increases, these officials said.

Nor did Obama's offer include raising the age of Medicare eligibility from 65 to 67, a Republican goal that has drawn particularly strong objections from Democratic liberals.

Several officials also said during the day that Boehner's offer late last week to accept higher tax rates included provisions that would mean higher taxes on investment income and dividends earned by wealthy Americans.

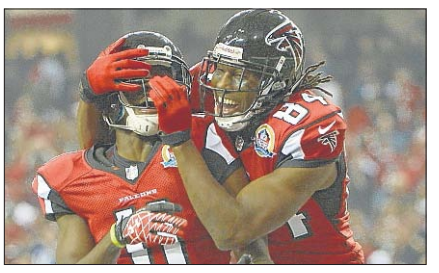

The people who described the talks did so on condition of anonymity, citing the secretive nature of the discussions.

The maneuvering is aimed at reaching an agreement that would include cancellation of a scheduled year-end hike in taxes for nearly all wage-earners as well as spending cuts at the Pentagon and in domestic programs across the government.

Economists inside and outside the government have warned that the combination of the two, set to begin at year's end, could send the economy into recession.

Mets deal Cy Young winner

R.A. Dickey breaks the news of his own trade to Blue Jays

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eager for a new challenge and certainly a better chance to win, R.A. Dickey broke the news of his trade even before the Toronto Blue Jays and New York Mets.

A few minutes ahead of the teams announcing the seven-player swap Monday that sent the NL Cy Young winner to Toronto, he tweeted his thanks to Mets fans and added he was all set to pitch for the Blue Jays.

"Now that its official, I want to say that I don't have the words to express how grateful I am to you for the steadfast support," Dickey posted on Twitter. "Thank you for making me feel wanted."

"Looking forward to a new chapter with the Jays," he wrote.

Toronto acquired the 38-year-old knuckleballer and catchers Josh Thole and Mike Nickeas. The Mets got top catching prospect Travis d'Arnaud and catcher John Buck, plus minor league right-hander Noah Syndergaard and outfielder Wuilmer Becerra.

"It was an extraordinary privilege for us to be part of his career," Mets general manager Sandy Alderson said about Dickey on a conference call. "The final chapter has not been written."

Earlier in the day, Dickey and the busy Blue Jays agreed to a new contract, clearing the way for the Mets to send him to a team that's spending a lot of money trying to join baseball's elite. Toronto has now acquired All-Stars Jose Reyes, Josh Johnson, Mark Buehrle, Melky Cabrera and Dickey since the season ended.

R.A. Dickey

Dickey was already signed for $5.25 million next year. His new contract adds two more seasons for $25 million — he will get $12 million in both 2014 and 2015, plus there's a club option for 2016 at $12 million with a $1 million buyout.

Dickey needed to pass a physical before the teams announced the deal. He became the fourth pitcher to win the Cy Young and be traded before the next season, joining David Cone, Pedro Martinez and Roger Clemens.

Alderson said the Mets' preference going into the offseason was to re-sign Dickey. But as the winter meetings approached in early December, Alderson said Dickey's value "in a possible trade was also sky-rocketing. At some point, those lines crossed."

Several teams made runs at a deal for Dickey, with Texas and the Los Angeles Angels among those in the mix. Alderson said while some clubs popped in and out of trade talks, Toronto's interest remained steady.

Alderson said the Mets didn't completely decide to trade Dickey until they saw the final package that Toronto offered.

"This was a complicated deal," Alderson said.

The Blue Jays have missed the playoffs since winning their second straight World Series crown in 1993, and have boldly moved to reshape a team that went 73-89 last season in the rugged AL East.

Last month, they acquired a high-priced trio — Johnson and Buehrle on the mound, Reyes at shortstop — in a 12-player trade with the Miami Marlins.

Toronto later signed Cabrera, an All-Star outfielder with San Francisco whose season ended when he was suspended 50 games for a positive testosterone test.

Dickey was 20-6 with a 2.73 ERA last season, capping his rapid rise from the majors' scrap heap to an ace pitcher. He did it by perfecting a way to throw his floater faster than previous knuckleballers, and tossing it with exceptional control.

INDIANAPOLIS — Butler guard Alex Barlow expected Monday morning's practice to be routine.

On the court, it was. Off the court, it was nowhere close.

Three players, including Barlow, were doing phone interviews. A couple of others were being pulled aside to talk to the reporters. Coach Brad Stevens sat patiently in the stands answering questions, all of this indicating that America's NCAA tournament darlings were back on the map.

"To me, it's kind of weird watching yourself on TV," said Barlow, the 5-foot-11 walk-on who hit the winning shot in Saturday's 88-86 overtime win over No. 1 Indiana. "It's kind of crazy to hear how people have misspoken some of our names or call me a former college baseball player."

There's no mistaking how Barlow and the Bulldogs got back here. The little school from Indianapolis is again beating college basketball's big boys in ways nobody thought possible.

MICHAEL CONROY/ASSOCIATED PRESS

On Saturday, it was Barlow who emerged as the unlikeliest star.

The sophomore from football powerhouse Cincinnati Moeller came to Butler to get a firsthand lesson in Basketball Coaching 101 from Stevens. He turned down multiple scholarship offers to play baseball, what many including his father thought was his best sport, and had scored just 12 points in nine games this season and 18 in his college career.

But with 6 seconds left in overtime, the wispy-looking guard slowly walked toward the lane, backed down Hoosiers guard Jordan Hulls toward the basket, then suddenly spun around and let loose a 6-foot jumper that hit the back of the rim and finally rattled in for the lead with less than 3 seconds to play. Barlow finished with six points, all in overtime. A career high.

What nearly got lost in the celebration, though, was that Barlow also came up with one of the key defensive plays of the game — a steal that led to Chase Stigall's 3-pointer, giving Butler an 86-84 lead that allowed the Bulldogs to dictate the rest of the game.

Those who know Barlow weren't nearly as surprised as the Hoosiers (9-1) or the national television audience.

"He's pretty measured in his words and he won't take any grief. He's a tough guy," Stevens said. "His high school coach (Carl Kremer) said he was similar to another Moeller kid we had, Mike Monserez, in competitiveness and will, and I think he (Monserez) was one of the all-time greats we've had here. So I told Carl if he (Barlow) wants to be here, it's automatic that he can walk on."

Barlow did consider two other schools, Clemson and Arizona State, but knew Butler was the right place for him after just one visit.

Now he will go down as the latest little-known Butler star to emerge on the national stage.

The group includes Joel Cornette, who traded shoes with another player after chasing a loose ball and running into a water cooler during Butler's 2003 NCAA tournament run to the regional semifinals; Darnell Archey, the 3-point specialist who set the NCAA record for most consecutive free throws and is on Stevens' staff; A.J. Graves, the MVP of the 2006 NIT Season Tip-Off, who had never been to New York City before that tournament; Gordon Hayward, who led Butler to the 2010 title game and just missed making a buzzer-beating half-court heave that would have beaten Duke for the title; and Matt Howard, the strong inside presence who was the key to Butler's back-to-back runs to the title game.

Now there's Barlow.

"We went out to Applebee's after the game and he was on the phone the whole time. We started calling him big shot," shooting guard Rotnei Clarke said, laughing. "It was fun messing with him because he gets a little sensitive about it."

The Bulldogs (8-2) should be getting used to this after the two tourney runs in 2010 and 2011 and now they're back at it, winning the Butler Way.

At last month's Maui Invitational, Clarke hit a buzzer-beating 3-pointer to knock off Marquette. The next night, Butler steamrolled North Carolina. On Dec. 8, they won at Northwestern, and then the Bulldogs pulled the biggest upset of the early season by taking down their fourth BCS-conference school of the season, Indiana, for the first win over a No. 1 team in school history.

"I was praying it would go in because looked like it was coming out to the right," said Clarke, who played in some big games at Arkansas but never beat a top-ranked team until transferring to Butler.

The voters have taken notice, too.

Just hours after the Bulldogs wrapped up their morning practice, Butler debuted at No. 19 in this week's Top 25. The only losses this season have to No. 10 Illinois in Maui and at Xavier.

Top-ranked Notre Dame has underdog in its DNA

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The rankings say Notre Dame is No. 1 going into the BCS championship against Alabama. Plenty of folks aren't buying it, starting with the oddsmakers who currently have the Crimson Tide as about a touchdown favorite for the Jan. 7 meeting in Miami between two of college football's proudest programs.

The Fighting Irish aren't sweating the point spread. In fact, it's pretty much business as usual for Notre Dame, which has a chance to become the first team since 1984 to start the season unranked and end it as national champions.

"Everybody thought everybody was better than us," defensive tackle Louis Nix III said Monday. "Oklahoma was better than us. USC was better than us.

"We get it. We know how everyone thinks. We're just Notre Dame. Overrated Notre Dame. No one gives us credit for anything. Just the luck of the Irish, I guess."

History suggests that being the underdog in the BCS title game hasn't been a bad thing. Of the 14 BCS championship games played since the system was implemented in 1998, seven have been won by the underdog.

Alabama was a slight underdog last year after losing to LSU in the regular season, and then shut out the Tigers with the national title on the line.

In the 2005 championship game between Texas and Southern California, Vince Young and the Longhorns felt as if they were being talked about as nothing more than a speed bump on the road to USC's coronation as one of the greatest teams in college football history. Plus, Young was still seething over coming in second to USC's Reggie Bush in the Heisman Trophy voting.

The result: Texas 41, USC 38, and a performance for the ages by Young.

The following season, Ohio State reached the national championship game with a perfect record, No. 1 ranking and a Heisman Trophy winner in quarterback Troy Smith. Florida was the Buckeyes opponent and the question was: Did the Gators even belong in game?

Urban Meyer, the Gators' coach, made sure his players got that message. Even if it meant stretching the truth a bit. After a month of being told that nobody thought they had a chance to beat Ohio State, the Gators routed the Buckeyes 41-14.

Schools made right move in abandoning the Big East

"The Catholic Seven," as they're now known, finally have realized what college sports fans across America have known for years.

The Big East isn't a real football conference.

It doesn't play anywhere near the same caliber of football as the Southeastern Conference, the Big 12 Conference or the Pacific 12 Conference. It's not as good as the Big Ten. Or even the Atlantic Coast Conference.

It doesn't deserve a seat at the Bowl Championship Series table.

It's a basketball league.

Always was.

Always will be.

So when the Big East's seven Catholic, basketball-centric, non-Football Bowl Subdivision schools break from the conference — as founding members St. John's, Georgetown, Villanova and Providence, along with DePaul and Marquette, voted unanimously Saturday to do -- they're merely going back to the league's roots.

They should be free to go. They should keep the Big East name, which the three remaining FBS schools shouldn't want, anyway. Then they should move on.

They can invite Xavier to join them. Maybe Butler and Dayton, too. They can put together a strong eight- or 10-school basketball league sure to fill arenas, draw big TV ratings and send multiple teams to the NCAA Tournament. They shouldn't, as a conference, play football.

They don't need football.

Certainly, they don't need to be misfits in a hybrid conference that enjoys BCS status -- for now, anyway — but plays an off-Broadway brand of football no one outside the Big East takes seriously.

And that's what they are.

That's why they're leaving a Big East that became so desperate to be relevant in football that it reached across three time zones to pull in Central Florida, Memphis, Houston, SMU, Boise State and San Diego State for membership in 2013, rendering its name meaningless.

That is, if there's still a Big East to belong to.

Don't be surprised if the folks at all of these schools -- including Central Florida, where athletic officials waited for years to get invited — reconsider their commitment to the conference and pursue other options. Same goes for Temple, which was a football member this year and will become an all-sports member next year.

Same goes for East Carolina and Tulane, both scheduled to join the Big East in 2014, and Navy, which planned to become a member in 2015.

More telling, though, is all the recent departures from the Big East, an exodus that began with Miami and Virginia Tech fleeing to the ACC in 2004 and continued with Boston College doing the same a year later.

Since then:

- TCU joined the conference but withdrew its commitment in 2011 and jumped to the Big 12 before playing a Big East game.
- West Virginia bolted for the Big 12 in 2012.
- Syracuse, Pittsburgh and Louisville are headed for the ACC next year.
- Rutgers is going to the Big Ten in 2014.
- Notre Dame, which is a Big East member in all sports but football, will move its non-football programs to the ACC in 2015.

Duke is back in No. 1 spot

Duke is back in a familiar place — No. 1.

The Blue Devils advanced one spot to replace Indiana at the top of The Associated Press' Top 25 on Monday, drawing closer to UCLA's record for most No. 1 rankings.

Duke has reached No. 1 at least once in a record 16 seasons under coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Indiana (9-1) held the top spot from the preseason poll through the first five weeks of the season. Butler beat the Hoosiers 88-86 in overtime Saturday.

The Blue Devils (9-0), whose only game in the past 2½ weeks was a victory over Temple on Dec. 8, received 62 first-place votes from the 65-member national media panel.

Rhule introduced as Temple's coach

PHILADELPHIA – Temple introduced Matt Rhule as its new coach on Monday.

Rhule, 37, who left his post as assistant offensive line coach with the Super Bowl-champion New York Giants to take over the Owls, has 15 seasons of coaching experience, and is a former linebacker at Penn State.

He will replace Steve Addazio, who left Temple earlier this month to take the same post at Boston College. Addazio was with the Owls for just two years.

The Owls are coming off a 4-7 season, in which they went 2-5 in the Big East.

Wall is waiting to test his knee

WASHINGTON – Washington Wizards point guard John Wall figures there is no way he will miss the entire season.

Still, he said there's only "a 50-50 chance" his injured left knee will respond well when swelling subsides, which he hopes will happen later this week.

"I'm still waiting for my pain and swelling to go down to see what I can do on the court, but just trying to stay strong," Wall said Monday in a rare session with reporters.

The No. 1 overall pick in the 2010 NBA draft visited a doctor in New York on Friday, getting a lubricating injection in the knee.

Butler looking at 'Catholic 7'

INDIANAPOLIS – Butler basketball could be changing conferences again.

Two days after school president James Danko told The Associated Press he would not rule out the possibility of joining a new conference with the seven Catholic schools that are leaving the Big East, he issued a statement calling the rumors a "tribute" to the Bulldogs' success.

The language is likely to create even more buzz about whether the Bulldogs will make a second conference move. In May, Danko announced the Bulldogs were leaving their longtime home, the Horizon League, for the Atlantic 10.

Still ill, Vonn is heading home

ALTA BADIA, Italy – Lindsey Vonn is heading back to the United States for an unexpected break in the middle of the World Cup ski season and is unlikely to return to Europe until January.

U.S. women's coach Alex Hoedlmoser told The Associated Press on Monday that Vonn's heavy schedule has not allowed the four-time overall World Cup winner to recover from the intestinal illness that landed her in a hospital in Vail, Colo., last month.

Hoedlmoser said the timing of Vonn's return "depends on how she's feeling and exactly what her condition is."

Titans hold off Jets 14-10

■ Tennessee ends New York playoff hopes

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

JOE HOWELL/ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Jets running back Shonn Greene (23) is tripped up by Tennessee Titans defensive end Kamerion Wimbley (95) in the first quarter of their NFL game on Monday night in Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Chris Johnson went 94 yards for the longest touchdown run in the NFL since 2006 and the Tennessee Titans beat the Jets 14-10 on Monday night to eliminate New York from playoff contention.

Jake Locker's first touchdown run of the season put Tennessee ahead late in the third quarter and the Titans intercepted four passes by a struggling Mark Sanchez to snap a three-game skid.

The Jets (6-8) needed to win their final three games and get help elsewhere to earn an AFC playoff spot. Instead, the Titans sacked Sanchez three times and got a fourth on Tim Tebow. Jason McCourty and Michael Griffin each had two interceptions, keeping the Jets out of the playoffs a second straight season after reaching consecutive AFC title games.

Johnson, with the names of the victims of Friday's shootings in Connecticut written on his cleats, ran 94 yards for a franchise-record TD in the second quarter. Locker's 13-yard TD run at the end of the third put the Titans (5-9) ahead to stay.

Locker's 13-yard quarterback keeper around left end with 20 seconds left in the third quarter gave the Titans a 14-10 lead.

The Jets took a 10-7 lead when Sanchez and Jeff Cumberland connected on a 17-yard touchdown pass with 3:19 to go in the third. The Titans responded on their next possession with Locker's first touchdown run of the season, capping a seven-play, 64-yard drive.

On Cumberland's touchdown, the Jets' tight end caught a third-and-12 pass at about the 5-yard line after getting behind Titans linebacker Tim Shaw, starting in place of injured defensive captain Colin McCarthy. Cumberland headed into the end zone from there.

The Jets began that drive at the Titans 35 after Brett Kern shanked a 30-yard punt. Kern has been one of the few steady performers this season for the Titans.

The Titans owned a 7-3 halftime lead after Johnson's long scamper in the second quarter. His touchdown run was the longest by any NFL player since Minnesota's Chester Taylor had a 95-yard TD in a 31-13 victory over the Seattle Seahawks on Oct. 22, 2006.

After Robert Malone's 53-yard punt backed the Titans up to their own 5-yard line, Johnson rushed for 1 yard on first down. On the next play, he found a seam up the middle and appeared untouched on his way to the end zone.

Jets safety Yeremiah Bell chased Johnson most of the way and made an unsuccessful diving attempt to tackle him from behind inside the 15.

The previous record for the longest run in franchise history was 91 yards, a mark shared by Johnson and Sid Blanks. Johnson had a 91-yard run against the Houston Texans in 2009. Blanks also did it against the Jets in 1964.

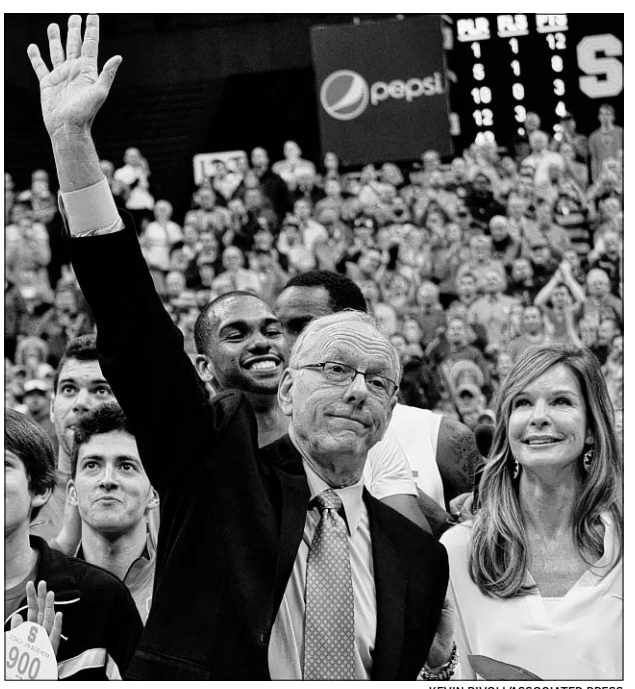

This marked Johnson's sixth career touchdown run of at least 80 yards, giving him twice as many as anyone else in NFL history. Barry Sanders, Ahman Green, Hugh McElhenny and O.J. Simpson each had three touchdown runs of at least 80 yards.

Johnson was otherwise held in check, but he still headed into the fourth quarter with 110 yards rushing on 10 carries, giving him 32 career 100-yard games.

The Jets grabbed a 3-0 lead when Nick Folk's 22-yard field goal capped their first possession of the night.

Boeheim collects 900th win

Wire reports

KEVIN RIVOLI/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim, standing next to his wife, Julie, waves to the crowd after his 900th win in Syracuse's 72-68 victory over Detroit on Monday night in Syracuse, N.Y.

Jim Boeheim became the third Division I men's coach to reach 900 wins as No. 3 Syracuse beat Detroit 72-68 on Monday night in the Gotham Classic.

Boeheim, 68 and in his 37th year at his alma mater, is 900-304 and joined an elite fraternity. Mike Krzyzewski (936) and Bob Knight (902) are the only other men's Division I coaches to win that many games.

Detroit Mayor Dave Bing, Boeheim's college roommate, teammate and fellow Hall of Famer, and Roosevelt Bouie, a star on Boeheim's first team in 1976-77, were in the Carrier Dome crowd of 17,902. Midway through the second half, fans were given placards featuring cardboard cutouts of Boeheim's face with 900 wins printed on the back to celebrate.

Boeheim was presented a jersey encased in glass with 900 emblazoned on it.

■ Murray State 75, Western Ky. 70: Isaiah Canaan had 21 points and five assists to lead Murray State to its fifth straight victory, 75-70 over Western Kentucky in a nonconference game Sunday.

Canaan scored eight of his points during a 14-2 run by the Racers (8-1) that turned a 54-52 deficit with 7:17 remaining into a 66-56 advantage at the 3:34 mark.

The Hilltoppers (8-3), who had won six straight, cut their deficit to 68-64 with 1:54 left after two consecutive 3-pointers by Brandon Harris, who led them with a career-high 23 points after coming in averaging 4.2.

A layup by Dexter Fields pushed Murray State's lead back to six, 70-64, and the Racers hit five free throws in the final minute, three by Canaan, to secure the victory.

Ed Daniel added 16 points, Fields 14 and Stacy Wilson 13 for Murray State. Teeng Akol scored 14 points and George Fant 10 for Western Kentucky.

■ Missouri 102, South Carolina St. 51: Jabari Brown, playing in his first game since Nov. 17, 2011 when he was a freshman at Oregon, scored 12 points and No. 12 Missouri beat South Carolina State 102-51 on Monday night.

Brown, 6-foot-5, 205-pound guard, became eligible at the end of the first semester. He entered the game with 16:01 left in the first half. After a missed 3-pointer, he assisted on a fast-break layup by Negus Webster-Chan. He scored his first points on two free throws with 9:35 remaining.

■ Notre Dame 74, IPFW 62: Pat Connaughton scored 18 points to lead No. 22 Notre Dame to a 74-62 victory over IPFW on Monday night.

Connaughton more than doubled his 7.9 points-per-game average and had six rebounds and five assists.

Notre Dame (10-1) led 40-28 at halftime then opened the second half with a 9-5 run over the first 4:21, capped by a two-handed stuff by Jack Cooley off a full-court fastbreak pass from Jerian Grant. The Irish extended their lead to 19 points on a layup by Garrick Sherman with 13:35 to play.

■ UNLV 62, UTEP 60: Anthony Marshall scored 13 points and Bryce DeJean-Jones added 12 for No. 21 UNLV in a 62-60 victory over UTEP on Monday night.

Jaques Streeter scored with 27 seconds left to UNLV's lead to two points. DeJean-Jones had an opportunity to make it a two-possession game but missed two free throws with 15 seconds left.

Breakup complicates Notre Dame departure from troubled Big East

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. – Notre Dame's athletic director says the recently announced split between the Big East and seven schools that don't play major college football could complicate the Fighting Irish's exit from the conference.

"Those two parties have to divide assets," Jack Swarbrick told reporters Monday. "It poses a question about who you're even talking to. Who is the Big East? Which of the two sides of that has the Big East name and rights, and who might lay claim to the Notre Dame affiliation going forward? It's an interesting dynamic to try and figure out where all that's headed. One of the real challenges we have right now is trying to assess when that might settle out."

Notre Dame announced in September it is leaving the Big East to join the Atlantic Coast Conference, though its football program will remain independent.

Big East bylaws require 27 months' notice from departing members, which would put Notre Dame's arrival in the ACC at 2015. The Irish would like to get out sooner and the Big East has been willing to discuss an early exit.

Swarbrick said that Notre Dame, like the seven Catholic schools, is not on the hook to pay an exit fee to the Big East. He said Big East rules that allow groups of schools to leave without financial penalty apply to the Fighting Irish. But an early exit might require some type of compensation.

West Virginia, Syracuse and Pittsburgh have all paid millions of dollars, in addition to the Big East's exit fees, to leave the conference before the notification period.

Lin leads Rockets' rout in his return to New York

Wire reports

Jeremy Lin had 22 points and eight assists in his return to New York, leading the Houston Rockets to a 109-96 victory Monday night that ended the Knicks' 10-game home winning streak to open the season.

Cheered then jeered, and later clobbered, Lin added another masterpiece to the ones he put together last season during the height of Linsanity. No longer the fan favorite he was when wearing the home uniform, Lin got a mixed reception when he left the game with 2:25 remaining and the Rockets leading by 16.

James Harden had 28 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets, who blew out the Knicks for the second time this season. They have won the last seven meetings, including a 131-103 rout in Houston on Nov. 23.

Rookie Chris Copeland scored a career-high 29 points for the Knicks, who played without leading scorer Carmelo Anthony and had their four-game winning streak snapped.

■ Clippers 88, Pistons 76: Jamal Crawford scored 15 points and Chris Paul added 14 to lead the Los Angeles Clippers to their 10th straight win, 88-76 over the Detroit Pistons on Tuesday night.

Blake Griffin had 15 points for Los Angeles, which had five players in double figures. Griffin had two breakaway dunks in the last 30 seconds, one on a pass banked off the backboard by Crawford.

Brandon Knight led the Pistons with 16 points and Tayshaun Prince added 15. Detroit has lost five straight.

■ Magic 102, Wolves 93: Glen Davis scored 28 points and J.J. Redick had 18 points and seven assists as the Orlando Magic beat the Minnesota Timberwolves 102-93 on Monday night.

Kevin Love had 23 points and 15 rebounds and Nikola Pekovic added 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who had won four straight coming into the game.

■ Thunder 107, Spurs 93: Serge Ibaka tied his career-best with 25 points and grabbed a season-high 17 rebounds, and the Oklahoma City Thunder beat the San Antonio Spurs 107-93 Monday night to maintain sole possession of the best record in the NBA.

The Thunder took control with a string of 11 straight points during the third quarter, punctuated by Nick Collison's putback that made it 71-56 with 4:27 remaining in the period.

■ Grizzlies 80, Bulls 71: Mike Conley had 17 points, Zach Randolph added 10 points and 15 rebounds and the Memphis Grizzlies overcame a poor start to beat the Chicago Bulls 80-71 on Monday night.

Conley was 6 of 12 from the field and had four assists. Rudy Gay had 12 points for Memphis but shot 5 of 13, continuing his slump.

UK's kiddies growing up; Petrino to WKU a poor hire

Against another outmanned if feisty foe, Lipscomb, the Kentucky Wildcats are improved. John Calipari can circle-talk, make it complicated, but it isn't. Big Blue fans are witnessing one-season removed high school hot shots coming of age. How to adjust from being The Man, into a (what?) role player.

Against Lipscomb, Archie Goodwin appeared to accept he is not Dwyane Wade; Kyle Wiltjer knows his stand-and-shoot freebies from the perimeter are over until opponents are convinced Alex Poythress is Terrence Jones.

Nerlens Noel is finding rhythm, Ryan Harrow, a groove, and Jarrod Polson a new role, from People's Choice to Glue Factor.

Next, Marshall should give Kentucky a reasonable test. Maybe a how-to in physical play. Point of interest: Will Poythress ignore the 'who me?' reaction to foul calls, skip the pout, and go get the ball?

Footnote. If Calipari's out-of-coach-box antics continue, the coach will cost Kentucky a technical foul, a crucial possession, even a win down the road. Ever more frequently as he rails at his players and/or the officials, Calipari wanders beyond the sideline coach's box, and at times on the playing floor.

WESTERN-PETRINO

Western Kentucky hiring Bob Petrino is disappointing. Morally, a poor choice.

Financially, the gamble is a big name on coach office door, however long it stays, profits Hilltopper athletics. (Note: Ticket price hike, wait for it).

As director of athletics Todd Stewart adjusts the feather in his cap, it seems folly to believe WKU becomes a bigger player in college sports because of this coach.

Optimist view: Western is taking one step back to take two $teps forward ... later.

Petrino contract with Hilltopper football is (coach) history repeating itself. In 1989 Rick Pitino's alliance (not allegiance) with C.M. Newton and Kentucky basketball was what it was, a stepping stone (to the Celtics).

Track record proves Petrino will be no more dedicated to Bowling Green than he was to Louisville, Atlanta or Fayetteville.

Let us hope then, Western's athletic bank account is flush with cash, when the football transitions again.

MURRAY-WESTERN

Among college basketball's most entertaining games so far — Western Kentucky at Murray State. The 75-70 final was a Murray State home win more than a WKU loss.

Murray's Isaiah Canaan demonstrated again his All-American qualities — superb leader and uncanny shooter in a game's last five minutes. This is not last season's Racers, but fans who like it hot, would do well to have tickets for Murray games with Eastern Kentucky, Morehead State and Belmont.

Western? Defense was good enough to win at Murray. The offense, without starters T.J. Price and Jamal Crook and with no help from Kevin Kaspar, faltered. With dates at VCU and Louisville in Nashville coming up, offense is fixable.

HERO & THE SHOT!

A hero most admired is one who gathers up his gall, recognizes a moment, grabs it by the throat and shakes the daylights out of it.

Alex Barlow, walk-on at Butler U., took a pass against No. 1 Indiana the other day, dribbled to front court, spun into the lane and took The Shot. Bumpity bump and in.

Bedlam. From the realm of Whatsisname, in a flash, Alex Barlow ascended to basketball's summit.

Alex who?

A 5-11 kid straight out of your backyard pickup game popped onto the scene and gave us relief from the tiresome flood of hyperbole lavished on 5-star anointees, McDonalds' All-Americans and television analysts who screech "did you see that!?"

We can be sure, can't we, that Butler coach Brad Stevens called Barlow's number for the last shot? As certain perhaps as we can swallow Tom Crean's explanation for lifting his best shot blocker Cody Zeller (14 in 10 games) for the final 19 seconds.

Barlow's clear look at the hoop for a twisting turn-around shot that took a quirky bounce-on-the-rim, magnified Crean's mortifying blunder. But never mind. This week marks Barlow's Bravery. Break out the tee-shirts and pen another episode into Hoosier basketball book of magic.

Postscript. Barlow's dagger last week brought to mind IU's Christian Watford's shot against Kentucky this time a year ago, and the old sports notion: "what goes around, comes around."

'TEAMS TO BEAT'

Team to beat in April (NCAA finals) remains Indiana, Butler coach Stevens said after his team shocked IU last week. He was being politically correct of course.

Reality is, as we head to Christmas, the Teams-to-Beat-in-April category has three and none is named Indiana.

As Santa Claus loads his sleigh and downs a couple Tylenol, Duke, Louisville and Kansas are in the mix.

Duke tops the poll because of its customary modus operandi — smarts meshed and maximized into (what else?) teamness.

Louisville is emerging as a Pitino Deluxe. Veteran team driven by a man whose trademarks should already have him in the Hall of Fame — relentless defense and the WILL to "make 'em play how we want to play." Fast, frantic, physical, exhausting and full out for 40.

PARTING SHOT

Forbes Magazine ranking for best college for the money was published recently. Where do the Commonwealth of Kentucky universities rank?

No. 90 is Centre, 186 is Transylvania, 190 is Berea, 224 is Bellarmine and Asbury is 339th. At 541st is Louisville and Murray State is 547th.

Aspirant to become one of America's Top 20 universities is my alma mater, University of Kentucky ... ranks 410th.

And so it goes.

Predicting the NFL a fool's game

■ Weekend's super matchups turned out to be not so super

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

So you think you know the NFL?

Perhaps you can predict the future, tame the weather and forecast winning lottery numbers, too.

Those claiming to know what will happen in pro football need only look at what went on this wild weekend, which featured a half-dozen super matchups that didn't turn out quite so super.

Nothing could be juicier than the defending champion New York Giants at Atlanta.

Oops: Falcons 34, Giants 0.

OK, then Denver at Baltimore. Delicious.

Sorry: Broncos 34, Ravens 17.

Houston, coming off an embarrassing Monday night rout at New England, against Indianapolis for AFC South supremacy.

Pffft: Texans 29-17 to clinch the division.

For something even more absurd than the lack of competitiveness in those games, try this one: San Francisco 31, New England 3 in the third quarter.

And this: Patriots 31, 49ers 31 with 6:43 left in the fourth quarter.

Just when the Patriots were on their way to matching the greatest regular-season comeback win in NFL history, the Niners turned around and won 41-34.

"It's a little bit crazy, a little bit surreal," said 49ers quarterback Colin Kaepernick, who threw for a career-best four touchdowns in his fifth start since replacing Alex Smith.

A little bit? That's the NFL this season.

If anyone thinks the weirdness has ended with two weeks remaining, well, don't count on it.

"The season's not over," Tom Brady said after his team that doesn't lose at home in December (20 straight wins heading into the San Francisco game) or in the second half of the schedule (21 straight victories anywhere) lost. And committed four turnovers, nearly half the 10 it had given away beforehand. "There's still a lot of football to play."

Plenty of meaningful football. About the only thing predictable is that there will be lots of surprises in those remaining games, too.

Here's what everyone can look forward to.

NFC

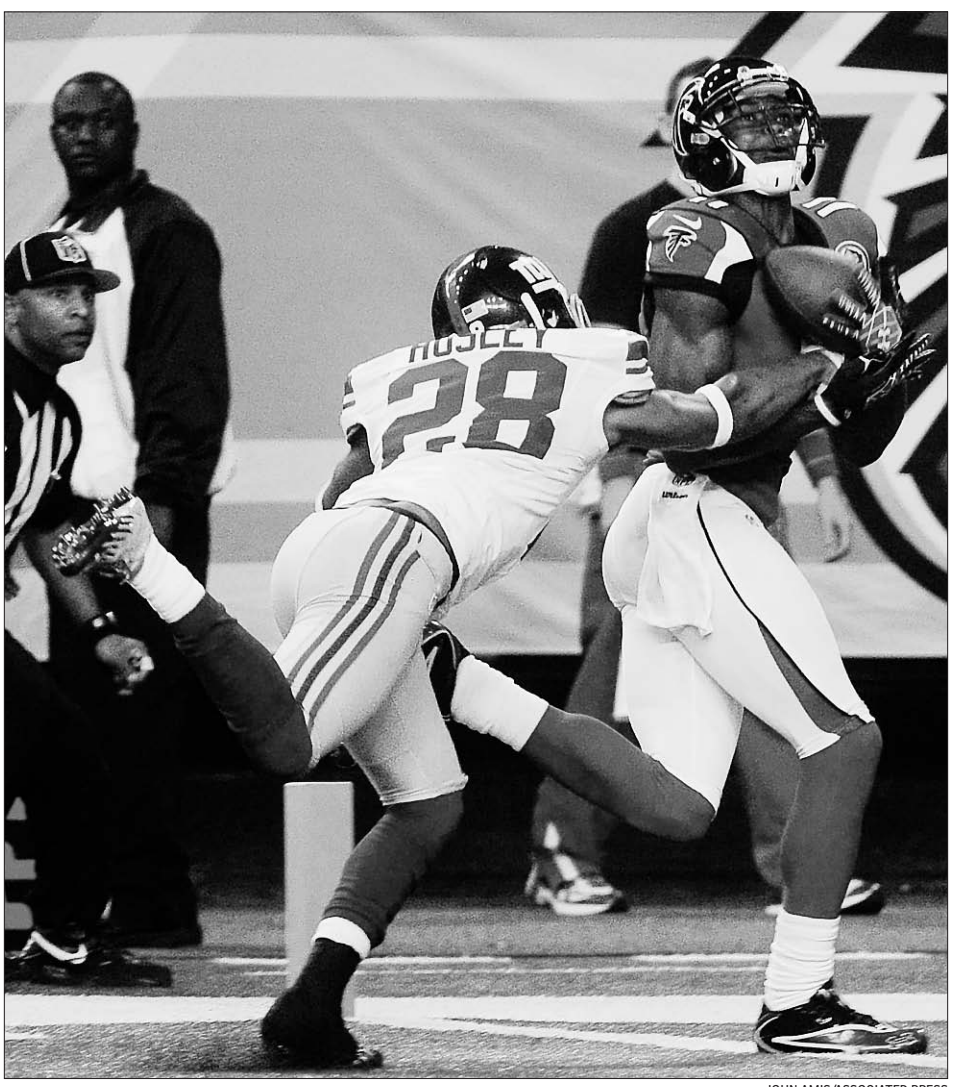

Atlanta (12-2 in the South) and Green Bay (10-4 in the North) are division winners, with the Falcons in position to get home-field advantage throughout the playoffs.

San Francisco (10-3-1) will earn the West with a victory at Seattle (9-5) next Sunday. But the Seahawks are 6-0 at home, have a dynamic defense to match the 49ers' unit, and are oozing with confidence thanks to a three-game winning streak and five victories in the last six outings.

The league moved that game to the prime-time telecast and NBC must be salivating after the Seahawks scored 50 points for the second straight week.

"What's important is that you continue to execute really well regardless of the circumstances and who you're playing," coach Pete Carroll said.

The East is in a three-team deadlock: New York, Washington and Dallas, all at 8-6. If either the Redskins or Cowboys win out, they'll take the division. They meet at Washington in the season finale.

JOHN AMIS/ASSOCIATED PRESS
Atlanta Falcons wide receiver Julio Jones (11) makes a touchdown catch as New York Giants cornerback Jayron Hosley (28) defends during their NFL game on Sunday in Atlanta.

Meanwhile, after three straight road losses, the Giants need help to repeat in the division.

Very alive for the wild card are all three East teams, the runner-up in the West, plus Minnesota and Chicago, also 8-6. But the Bears are skidding and banged-up. With the way Adrian Peterson is playing, counting them out would be foolhardy.

AFC

Houston (12-2), despite that flop at Foxborough, is in good shape to remain at home throughout; one more victory earns the South champion that advantage. However, both remaining opponents, Minnesota and Indy, are chasing wild-card slots.

Denver (11-3) has won nine in a row and is a far superior team to the one that lost earlier this season to the Texans and Patriots. Peyton Manning has gotten more in tune with his teammates as the season has progressed, and the defense is fierce.

Plus, the West-winning Broncos finish with home games against weaklings Cleveland and Kansas City.

New England's strange loss to the 49ers puts it in a precarious position for a club that certainly looked like the league's best before Sunday. If it beats Jacksonville and Miami, it will finish 12-4, but that might get only the third seed and no bye for the East champ.

It also could mean a trip to the Mile High City in the divisional round.

The North has three teams struggling to reach the finish line. Baltimore (9-5) has lost three in a row, yet secured a playoff berth Sunday.

It leads Cincinnati by one game and finishes with the Bengals after meeting the Giants next weekend.

Cincinnati and the Steelers (7-7) face off next week at Pittsburgh. A loss pretty much eliminated the Steelers.

The Colts (9-5) have the best shot at a wild card and a win at Kansas City next week should do it.

Not that we're predicting any such thing these days.

Catholic conference: Challenge, opportunity

By Justin Pope
Associated Press

As a chunk of the Big East transforms itself into a mostly or even all-Catholic basketball league, the conference faces a choice: play up or play down its faith-based roots?

With Catholic higher education already struggling to strike a balance between faith and financial security, either course carries both challenges and opportunities.

On the one hand, the seven schools that announced Saturday they'll set off on their own — St. John's, Georgetown, Marquette, DePaul, Seton Hall, Providence and Villanova — have already made clear they'll look to non-denominational institutions that otherwise fit their profile, such as Butler, to expand.

But even if they do so, the conference's identity will likely lie with its core of Catholic-rooted schools. To be sure, going overboard with that identity could harm recruiting of non-Catholic students — both athletes and non-athletes — and limit expansion. But a moderate embrace could help institutions reconnect their sports programs to their missions, and reinvigorate their religious identities at a time when important groups on campus fear it's slipping away.

Think of a non-secular Ivy League, but with much better basketball. It might take a leap of faith to believe these days, but the NCAA's musical chairs game of conference realignment isn't always just about money.

"Its' not all about revenue," said Warren Zola, an assistant dean at Boston College's Carroll School of Management, who follows college sports business issues closely. "It's partly about brand. I think the Catholic schools are looking at that and thinking, 'What do we have in common with the existing Big East and the future Big East?'"

It's not a coincidence that the seven schools that announced Saturday they're separating from the Big East are all Catholic. They're each part of a tradition that emerged in the late 19th and early 20th centuries — church institutions that sprang up to serve urban immigrant communities. Neither their demographics nor tightly-packed city campuses lent themselves to football players and stadiums .

Eagles QB Vick won't complain about his backup role

By Rob Maadi
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Vick went from MVP candidate to scout team quarterback in two years.

Back from a concussion that forced him to miss five games, Vick is finishing out the season with the Philadelphia Eagles (4-10) on the sideline. He may not even be active for Sunday's game against Washington (8-6).

"I'm a competitor and I've always felt like and will continue to feel like I'm one of the best and I can play at a high level and I know I can," Vick said Monday. "Saying that, I feel like I want to be out there, I want to play as a competitor, but it's just not the ideal situation right now, the way things are. So, I have to accept my role, accept it like a man and continue to find positives out of it."

Coach Andy Reid already named rookie Nick Foles the starter for the rest of the season a few weeks ago. The Eagles have been out of playoff contention for a while, so Reid decided to look toward a future that may not include him.

But Reid isn't the only one likely to go. Vick may have played his last game for the Eagles, too. Vick is due to make nearly $16 million in 2013, far too much for a backup. Only $3 million is guaranteed, however, and the Eagles won't have to pay that if Vick is cut by Feb. 3.

"I just feel like I've got a lot of football to play," Vick said. "I feel like I've got a lot left in my tank. I'm enjoying the game, I feel fresh. I'll have to talk it over with my agent and just see what happens. As of right now, I've got to continue to help this football team win these last two games and the future will take care of itself."

Vick struggled this season, committing 14 turnovers in nine games. He has 2,165 yards passing, 11 TDs and nine interceptions for a passer rating of 79.2. Since leading the Eagles to the 2010 NFC East title and starting in the Pro Bowl, Vick has been downright mediocre.

Diet Pepsi using new sweetner mixture

■ Product started hitting shelves in early December

By Candice Choi
AP food industry writer

NEW YORK — Diet Pepsi is quietly changing its sweetener ahead of a major rebranding of the soft drink set for next month.

The change comes as PepsiCo Inc. looks to reinvigorate its namesake brands after losing market share to Coca-Cola Co. in recent years.

Cans of Diet Pepsi around the country now list a mix of two artificial sweeteners, a pairing that is commonly found in newer diet sodas. Previously, Diet Pepsi used only aspartame, which is sensitive to heat and breaks down more easily.

This summer, PepsiCo had declined to say whether it would go ahead with such a change after reports surfaced that it was testing the new sweeteners.

Although the switch is only intended to help prevent the taste from degrading over time, companies are often sensitive to public perceptions that they might be tinkering with major brands.

PepsiCo executives likely don't want to call any attention to the use of artificial sweeteners in the drink either.

When reached for comment Sunday, PepsiCo spokeswoman Andrea Canabal said that Diet Pepsi using the new sweetener mix started hitting shelves in early December. She said the new mix will be more widely available in the coming weeks.

"It's not like a light switch. It'll start appearing as shelf space clears," she said. In January, Canabal said the company is planning a major ad campaign that will include a new logo with a heart and the theme "Love Every Sip."

The sweetener change will not be explicitly communicated in the ads, which will feature actress Sofia Vergara.

In addition to aspartame, cans of Diet Pepsi found in New York, Omaha, Neb., and the Bay Area now list acesulfame potassium as an ingredient. The ingredient is often used in combination with other artificial sweeteners and can be found in a wide range of foods including baked goods, chewing gum and gelatin desserts.

John Sicher, editor and publisher of the industry tracker Beverage Digest, said the synergistic effect of mixing the two sweeteners is intended to help keep the drink's sweetening power at a constant level, making it taste fresh longer.

"A change in sweetener does not change the flavor," he noted.

PepsiCo said in a statement Sunday that it was adding a "very small amount" of acesulfame potassium "to ensure consistency with every sip." The sweeteners used in Diet Pepsi vary depending on the region of the world.

The move to improve Diet Pepsi comes amid a broader push by PepsiCo to boost sales of its flagship soda. Under pressure from investors, CEO Indra Nooyi earlier this year announced the company would step up investment in its flagship brands.

Already this year, PepsiCo has made several splashy moves including a wide-ranging partnership with singer Beyonce and a multiyear deal with the National Football League to sponsor the Super Bowl halftime show. TV ads for Pepsi have also featured singer Nicki Minaj, New Orleans Saints quarterback Drew Brees, the boy band One Direction and international soccer stars including Lionel Messi.

COMMODITIES

Industrial metals prices fell Monday after manufacturing slowed in the New York area this month, reflecting a sluggish trend across the nation.

Copper, silver, platinum and palladium each fell less than 1 percent.

The Federal Reserve's Empire State Manufacturing Survey found that general business conditions declined in December for a fifth consecutive month. Orders and shipments also fell.

The results mirror a weaker trend in U.S. manufacturing, which shrank in November to the slowest pace since July 2009, according to the Institute for Supply Management.

Company owners have delayed purchases of machinery and equipment because of uncertainty about where the economy may be headed.

There also are worries about demand in China after new Communist Party leaders promised reforms aimed at reducing reliance on exports and increasing spending if needed to promote economic growth. China is a huge importer of raw materials, including copper, oil and soybeans.

Demand for industrial metals largely depends on stimulus measures to help the economy and rebuilding. None of that will start until the first quarter of next year, said George Gero, vice president at RBC Global Futures.

In March metals contracts, silver fell 1.9 cents to finish at $32.28 per ounce, copper dropped 1.7 cents to $3.666 per pound and palladium ended down $3.75 at $698.30 an ounce. January platinum fell $6 to $1,608.50 an ounce.

The price of gold rose slightly on encouraging signs about the budget negotiations. President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner need to reach an agreement on a new budget that can be approved by Congress before Jan. 1. Without a deal, spending cuts and tax hikes will go into effect that some economists believe will push the U.S. in recession.

Gold for February delivery rose $1.20 to end at $1,698.20 an ounce.

Volume was light across the metals complex as many traders solidified their portfolios ahead of next week's holidays.

Budget talk progress spurs stocks

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks rose on Wall Street as investors were encouraged by signs of progress in budget talks in Washington. Just two weeks remain before tax increases and government spending cuts take effect if no deal is reached.

On the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, stock traders paused for a minute of silence at 9:15 a.m. EST to remember the 20 children and seven adults killed Friday in a gunman's rampage through a Connecticut elementary school.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 100.38 points to 13,235.39, its biggest gain this month. The Standard & Poor's 500 index climbed 16.78 points to 1,430.36 and the Nasdaq composite index rose 39.27 points to 3,010.60.

Banks were among the best-performing stocks. Citigroup gained $1.55, 4.1 percent, to $39.15 after Raymond James raised its target price on the stock to $52 from $44. In a note to clients, the brokerage reaffirmed its "Strong Buy" rating, citing the "improving fundamental outlook." Bank of America also gained 42 cents, or 4 percent, to $11.

Investors are currently favoring financial stocks over technology stocks, said Ben Schwarz, chief market strategist at Lightspeed Financial.

"The banks are ripping today," Schwarz said. "People are looking for stability and the tech sector hasn't given them any."

Financial companies make up the best performing industry group in the S&P 500 this year, according to FactSet data. The group, which includes banks such as Wells Fargo & Co. and insurers such as Travelers, has gained 25 percent this year.

Apple rose $9.04, or 1.8 percent, to $518.83 after the company said it sold more than 2 million iPhone 5s in China in their first three days of availability. The technology giant's stock has fallen 26 percent since it closed at a record $702.10 in September and is trading close to its lowest since February.

Foreign holdings of U.S. debt hit record in October

By Christopher S. Rugaber
AP economics writer

WASHINGTON — Foreign ownership of U.S. Treasury securities rose to a record level in October, a sign that overseas investors remain confident in U.S. debt despite a potential budget crisis.

Total foreign holdings of U.S. Treasurys rose to $5.48 trillion in October, the Treasury Department said Monday. That was up 0.1 percent from September. Still, the increase of $6 billion was the weakest since total holdings fell in December 2011.

China, the largest holder of U.S. government debt, increased its holdings slightly to $1.16 trillion. Japan, the second-largest holder, boosted its holdings by a smaller amount to $1.13 trillion. Brazil, the country with the third-largest holdings, increased its total to $255.2 billion.

The new figures show that investors are still seeking the perceived safety of U.S. Treasurys, even as lawmakers and President Barack Obama remain at odds over whether to raise the U.S. borrowing limit as part of a broader budget deal.

But economists also said the slowdown in purchases of Treasury securities suggests that investors are more willing to buy other debt, including from European governments. That might indicate that fears of a financial catastrophe in Europe are easing.

The federal government is expected to hit its borrowing limit of $16.39 trillion by the end of December.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner has said he would resort to the same financial maneuvers he used in the last debt standoff in 2011 to keep the government from defaulting on its debt.

But these operations will buy only a few weeks' time, until late February or early March. By then, the government will face the prospect of a first-ever debt default if Congress doesn't raise the debt ceiling.

France's big stars relocating to avoid huge tax increase

The Associated Press

France's Socialist government is introducing a 75-percent income tax on those earning over $1.3 million, leading some of the country's rich and famous to set up residency in less fiscally demanding countries.

Here's a look at some big names in France and elsewhere whose changes of address over the years have meant lighter taxes.

■ The French prime minister has accused actor Gerard Depardieu of being "pathetic" and "unpatriotic," saying he set up residence in a small village just across the border in neighboring Belgium to avoid paying taxes in France.

■ In 2005, the Beatles' Ringo Starr took up residency in Monaco, where he gets to keep a higher percentage of royalties than he would in Britain or Los Angeles.

■ In 1972, The Rolling Stones controversially moved to the south of France to escape onerous British taxes. Though it caused a stink at the time, it spawned one of the group's most seminal albums, "Exile on Main St." The title is a reference to their tax-dodging.

Do you suffer from Cat Allergies?

An allergy to cat dander is one of the most common allergies, affecting an estimated 26 million people in the U.S. Symptoms of cat allergies can include sneezing, runny or stuffy nose, red or itchy eyes, hives or a rash on the chest or face, coughing or wheezing after coming in contact with a cat.

If you suffer from symptoms associated with a cat allergy, you may qualify to participate in a clinical research study being conducted at Deaconess Clinic. You must be age 12 to 65 to participate. Study participants receive no-cost, study-related office visits with board-certified allergists, study medication and compensation for time and travel.

Health insurance is not required for participation.

Best gifts arrive as traditions, memories from others

Dear Readers: Many of us are spending a lot of time this week scurrying around, looking for the "perfect" gift to bestow on family and friends.

And yet, looking back through our own holiday memories, we realize that the best gifts arrive in the form of traditions or objects that we can look at and know exactly where they came from.

We invest these simple possessions with meaning and memories.

For the past three years I have advocated for a gift-giving concept that is simple, straightforward, inexpensive, and that reaps boundless and lifelong rewards.

Like all my best ideas, this was stolen (borrowed, really). Pulitzer Prize-winning historian David McCullough (author of the books "Truman," "John Adams" and many others) once related in an interview that every Christmas morning during his childhood, he and his siblings awoke to the gift of a wrapped book on their beds, delivered in the night by Santa.

Thus was born "A Book on Every Bed." I have teamed with The Family Reading Partnership (familyreading.org) in my hometown of Ithaca, N.Y. With its help, this simple concept has spread through libraries, schools, churches and bookstores, across this country and beyond.

Here's how it works: You take a book (it can be a new book or a favorite from your own childhood). You wrap it.

On Christmas Eve (or whatever holiday you celebrate), you leave the book in a place where Santa is likely to find it. When I communicated with David McCullough about borrowing his idea, he was very clear: Santa handles the delivery and places the book on a child's bed.

In the morning, the children in your household will awaken to a gift that will far outlast any toy: literacy.

I know this for sure: No matter who you are or what you do, reading will unlock untold opportunities, mysteries and passions.

When you have a book and the ability to tell, read and share stories, you gain access to the universe of others' imaginations. And avid readers know that if you have a book, you are never alone.

We have probably exceeded our original goal for one million children to wake up on Christmas morning to a wrapped book, and so this year's appeal will be for parents, grandparents, teachers and librarians to continue to spread this concept in their families and communities.

Circulation, vinegar will help eliminate broccoli smell

Dear Heloise: We love steamed broccoli but don't like the smell it gives off while cooking.

Do you have any hints for how to eliminate the odor?

— Karen L., Oak Grove, Calif.

Dear Karen: Sure do, and I love it, too! When you cook broccoli in a kitchen, turn on the air vent over the stove or open the windows, if weather permits. Turn on ceiling fans to help circulate air.

Or, the old homestyle hint is to place a bowl of vinegar out on the counter near where you cook the broccoli.

It's yet another reason I love vinegar so much and wrote my pamphlet Heloise's Fantabulous Vinegar Hints and More! To receive a copy, send $5 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (65 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001.

Clean your ceiling fans with full-strength vinegar. It will get rid of dust and any grease (if in the kitchen), and leave the house smelling fresh and clean.

— Heloise

Send a money-saving or time-saving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000, or you can fax it to 1-210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com.

In heaven you will see God face to face

Dear Dr. Graham: Will we actually see God when we get to heaven? My friend says we will, but how is that possible? And anyway, how could we even think about entering God's presence, since He is so pure and we're so sinful?

— J. McK.

Dear J. McK.: Yes, some day we will be in God's presence forever if we know Christ, and we will see God in all of His greatness and glory. Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they will see God" (Matthew 5:8).

Can I imagine what that will be like? No, not really — because heaven will be far greater than anything we presently know. In some ways, heaven may be like our lives right now; we may even live in a world somewhat like our own — although one without sin or decay.

But in other ways it will be far more glorious than anything we've ever experienced — and one reason is because we will be in the presence of God forever.

Like the shepherds to whom the angels came on that first Christmas night, when we first glimpse heaven I'm sure we'll be overwhelmed by the glory of the Lord (see Luke 2:9).

You're correct, however, in saying we have no right to be in God's presence in heaven — because we are sinful and impure, and God is absolutely holy and pure.

But Jesus Christ came for one reason: to cleanse us from our sins so we could go to heaven when we die. He did this by becoming the final and complete sacrifice for our sins through His death on the cross.

Some day your life will be over, but are you prepared for that day? Don't delay, but trust Jesus Christ for your salvation — and then rejoice that someday you will be in God's presence forever.

Readers describe various effects from multivitamins

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I took a multivitamin faithfully for 20 years. I also have asthma. I wheezed every day. I ran out of the vitamin and forgot to buy more. Ten days without a vitamin and the wheezing stopped.

— S.W.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: Whenever I take a multivitamin, I feel nauseated. What's wrong with me?

— J.D.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I get dizzy after taking a multivitamin. When I don't take one, I'm fine.

— B.L

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I used a variety of multivitamin brands. They all gave me a pain in the stomach. I take the vitamins separately and have no trouble.

— E.D.

Dear All: Most multivitamin users have no problems with them. Some, however, do. I'm not sure why. It might be that a few people react to the filler material in a vitamin, the things that keep the pill or capsule together. The only solution I have is for these people to stop taking them.

A question frequently asked and answered with differing opinions is the necessity of taking a multivitamin. It wasn't until the early part of the 20th century that the structure and manufacturing of vitamins got its start.

From the dawn of man's appearance on Earth, no vitamins were ever taken in pill form until then. All those generations of people lived well without them. In some instances, vitamin deficiencies sprung up, but the connection between the deficiency and the lack of a vitamin wasn't made until the 1900s.

In the 18th century, James Lind fed British sailors limes and lemons and thereby prevented scurvy, a disease prevalent in the British navy. He didn't know the reason why these fruits were effective. It wasn't until relatively recently that scurvy proved to be a deficiency of vitamin C.

Some people feel that taking a multivitamin ensures that they are getting the recommended daily allowances for vitamins. However, the average American and Canadian has a variety of foods available to them, all rich in vitamins, and those foods are all they need to stay healthy.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of "To Your Good Health" beginning in January. Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Dec. 18). A different way of eating or exercising improves your health and image. A funny coincidence triggers a chain of good luck. Follow your curiosity into a new circle of friends in January. New living arrangements are featured in March. April brings the happy settlement of a negotiation. Libra and Cancer people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 1, 14, 38 and 20.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You'll be a translator of sorts, helping people communicate. Just as a song sung half in one language and half in another catches more ears, your work in two different areas will attract customers in both.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). There's something about a formal setting that brings out the best and worst in people. When the stakes seem high, every move becomes significant. Formalities provide the opportunity for observation and analysis.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Stay attuned to the people around you. Also, beware of those who are more interested in the rest of the room than in the ones they are with. It's either a sign of distress or a weakness of character.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Would you rather be with someone who talks nonstop or someone who barely speaks at all? You may get a taste of both personalities now, as both colorful and quiet people will be attracted to you.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). If the effort to be fun makes you feel frantic instead, consider that it might not be your fault. Maybe it's the other person. You deserve to have a stable presence in your life, someone who makes you feel safe and relaxed.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You long for life to bring a new color that your eyes have never touched. You crave a freshness you can inhale. It could happen if you're willing to go out of your way to crush monotony.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Though you don't like the dirty, icky, squishy things that sometimes happen organically, you still have a capacity for becoming enthralled by nature. You'll experience such beauty tonight.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You know how comforting it is to get the signals from others that you are accepted "as is." Therefore, you give those signals to others, making them feel relaxed and welcome to be themselves without pretension.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Like the flow of traffic on a freeway, the current pacing of your environment is the result of many collaborative factors. Matching the pace is smart. Pushing it along or holding it back isn't.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You have talent; no one will argue that. But you lack a few of the tools and techniques you need to get your talent to the world. Someone will help you remedy that situation today.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). In the future, people will behave much the same way they are behaving right now. Because you expect this, your antennae are fully extended. You are ready to dissect and interpret each move.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). The wound healed long ago, but the scar remains to tell the story. In time, that too will fade. But for now it's part of you. If you embrace it, everyone else will, too.

Watch out: SantaCon coming to town

■ Pub crawls innocent fun for some; a little overboard for others

By Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A San Francisco Police officer gives a man dressed as Santa Claus an open container ticket during the SantaCon pub crawl in downtown San Francisco.

People are shown dressed in Santa Claus outfits at Trafalgar Square in London as part of the annual SantaCon.

NEW YORK – It's a meetup, it's a party, it's a spectacle: SantaCon is coming to town — in fact, to nearly 300 towns and cities around the world.

Maybe you've seen them in your neighborhood: Dozens, sometimes hundreds of Santas ho, ho, ho-ing in and out of bars, stopping traffic and posing for photos. The red-suited, white-bearded revelers have gathered in Trafalgar Square in London and Tiananmen Square in Beijing. They've walked across the Brooklyn Bridge. And this past weekend in Los Angeles, they visited the space shuttle en masse at the California Science Center.

"It's innocent fun," said Tim Mambort, 27, who's been taking part in SantaCon in New York City for five years with friends from college. "You end up standing in a bar singing 'Jingle Bells' with people you just met, all dressed like Santa, or walking with hundreds of Santas to Central Park, or filling up an entire subway car with Santas."

But whether SantaCon is naughty or nice depends on whom you ask.

The website for the New York City event, planned for Saturday, says SantaCon "is not a bar crawl. Every time you call it that, a sugarplum fairy dies."

But the fact is, most SantaCons involve stops at bars along a prescribed route, and over the years, there have been isolated reports of misbehavior. In New York, police have issued summonses for violations of open container laws, and some bars refuse entry to anyone dressed in red. Last year, residents of Lower Manhattan complained of drunken Santas vomiting and urinating in the streets.

"There was one Santa lying on the ground and I saw a father go by with two young children and the little girl said, 'Daddy, what is wrong with Santa?' " said Community Board 1 member Paul Hovitz, who worries that the event encourages binge drinking and underage drinking.

Ian Sibley, who organizes the SantaCon.info webpage, acknowledges that "a dark shadow seems to haunt the event. So we take the extra step of emphasizing not drinking too much and perhaps supporting a good cause."

Indeed, many SantaCons require participants to bring donations for food banks or Toys for Tots, or raise money for children's charities or no-kill pet shelters.

Sibley started SantaCon.info five years ago with a half-dozen listings after "encountering this crazy thing with all these people dressed up like Santa" in Asheville, N.C. The website now lists nearly 275 events in 37 countries between November and January. Sibley says SantaCons have been held on every continent — from Uganda to Katmandu to Sydney and even Antarctica — but he dates the first events to the 1990s in Copenhagen and San Francisco. He says New York is one of the biggest, drawing 20,000 Santas.

Anna Sandler, a mom from Maplewood, N.J., thinks most participants take seriously the notion that SantaCon must not hurt Santa's image. Two years ago while pushing her toddler in a stroller in Manhattan, Sandler encountered "tons of Santas crossing the street and had no idea why. It was the most amazing spectacle." She stopped a few Santas to chat, then went home and looked the event up online.

"The Santas were completely hammered, but also completely polite," she said. "They were definitely following the SantaCon creed of being super-respectful."

Like zombie walks at Halloween, SantaCon is a grassroots phenomenon, organized locally and mostly through digital media, from email blasts and websites to Twitter and FourSquare. The term SantaCon may bring to mind Comic-Con, the pop culture convention, but there's no industry behind SantaCon, though a growth in sales of Santa suits led Party City to start advertising on SantaCon.info in 2011.

"Our Santa suits have always sold to the Santa who dresses up at the mall or dad dressing up at home," said Melissa Sprich, Party City's vice president of costumes and accessories. "But we started to see an increase in sales and were hearing that local events were occurring with people dressing up for this SantaCon thing."

Demographics for the events also led Party City to add Santa styles for women — including some sexy looks — as well as accessories like antlers.

Dana Humphrey, 29, who dressed like Mrs. Claus last year and is going as an elf this year, has made SantaCon in Manhattan a tradition with friends, starting with brunch, then joining SantaCon crowds for the route's first stop at a bar in the Wall Street area. Along the way, they've posed for photos at the famous Wall Street bull sculpture and done an Ace of Bass singalong with 80 Santas.

"You'll find groups of Santas doing all kinds of ridiculous things," she said.

Nigel Parry is organizing the fifth annual SantaCon in Lowertown, an artsy historic neighborhood in St. Paul, Minn. The gathering drew 200 Santas last year and is accompanied by a brass band that leads revelers in and out of bars. One of the first stops is billed as an "all ages" event at the Black Dog Cafe where parents can bring kids. But how do you explain to a wide-eyed 5-year-old why there are 50 Santas, not just one?

"That's up to the parents to get creative," Parry said. "Some just say, `These are not real Santas — they're just dressed up as Santa.'"

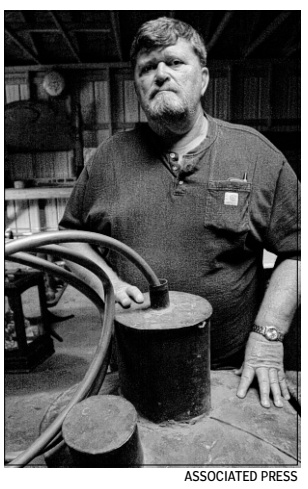

Some customers "come in early and stake out their seats" just to watch, said Sara Remke, co-owner of the Black Dog Cafe. "It's very much a spectator event."

But most SantaCons stress that they are not for kids, and Sibley says that's part of the appeal.

"The holidays tend to be family oriented and adults get squat," Sibley said. "They work hard all year and extra hard over the holidays. So when you get a costume on like Santa, the pressures of the real world are lifted. You have this strange camaraderie because everyone is dressed like you."

Alabama's last no-alcohol county votes dry, but drinks still available

By Jay Reeves
Associated Press

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clay County. Ala., Commission Chairman Wayne Watts poses with an old moonshine still in a storage room in Lineville, Ala. Watts favors legalizing limited alcohol sales in Clay, the last totally dry county in Alabama.

LINEVILLE, Ala. – Clay County has almost 14,000 residents, around 100 churches and not a single place where you can buy a beer legally.

There's no Bud Light in the cooler at the corner convenience store and no fine wine for sale at the Piggly Wiggly supermarket.

But bootleggers a few streets away will sell you a can of beer for $1.25.

This scenic but poor county in the hills about 50 miles east of Birmingham harkens back to the 1920s, when Prohibition was the law of the land. After a neighboring county recently voted wet, Clay County became the last bone-dry county in Alabama and one of a dwindling number across the nation.

Nestled at the southern tip of the Appalachians and lacking so much as a federal highway to bring in visitors, people here pride themselves on scraping by. To some, prohibiting legal alcohol sales is both a moral issue and part of being off the beaten path.

"Clay County is more of a rural setting. Family values are held more dearly to the heart," said the Rev. Bruce Willis, a staunch alcohol opponent and missions director of the Carey Baptist Association. With 33 churches that have 5,371 members on their rolls, the association accounts for about 39 percent of the county's entire population.

It's not that no one drinks in Clay County; possession of limited amounts of alcohol is legal, and plenty of residents buy beer and liquor across county lines and take it home. It's an open secret that bootleggers buy beer or liquor legally elsewhere and sell it in the county, said County Commission Chairman Wayne Watts, a former police chief of Lineville.

"It's pretty wet to be dry," said Watts, driving through a part of town where empty beer cans litter the ground marking bootleggers' homes.

But even supporters of legalizing alcohol sales see little chance things will change in a county that's best known for winning high school football teams and its most famous native, the late Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

"There's just hasn't been an appetite for it," said Matt Hooten, a businessman who splits his time between Clay County and Montgomery and favors the legalization of alcohol sales.

The issue last came up for a countywide vote in 1986, when overwhelming opposition from churches helped defeat the proposal 2,716-2,223. Local papers were filled with advertisements and letters from alcohol opponents leading up to the vote.

"Is placing my approval upon liquor morally right or wrong? God's word says it is wrong!" said one ad, placed by a pro-dry group whose chairman is the namesake for the local National Guard armory.

A petition for another referendum died about four years ago, and no one has tried again since then. Jimmy Barton, who remembers buying alcohol from bootleggers years ago and now owns an auto parts store, favors going wet. He still has one of the old petitions with only a few signatures and lots of empty lines where no one signed.

Staging a vote requires signatures from 25 percent of the people who voted in the last countywide election, and Barton said he's not sure when that will happen again.

"It's hard to read. You have closet drinkers who will vote it dry every time," he said.

No one keeps such statistics on exactly how many U.S. counties are totally dry, but the number appears to be decreasing, said Margaret Barchine. She's a spokeswoman for the National Alcohol Beverage Control Associations, composed of industry members and alcohol agencies in 17 states that have control organizations.

"Each state has its own way of operating," she said. "That makes it difficult."

But hundreds of counties prohibit sales at least in part.

Fewer than 50 of the 254 counties in Texas are totally wet, with the remaining banning sales at least in part, according to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Kentucky is one of the soberest states, at least by law, with 39 of its 120 counties totally banning alcohol sales, just like Clay County.

Of Alabama's 67 counties, 25 are dry in unincorporated areas yet also have cities where alcohol sales are legal. Blount County recently voted against allowing legalized sales yet it has two country clubs where the booze flows freely — and legally — under a special exemption.

Christmas travel forecast is the busiest in six years

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – This Christmas travel season could be the busiest in six years, with AAA predicting that 93.3 million Americans will hit the road. That's 1.6 percent more than last year and just 400,000 people shy of the 2006 record.

More cars will crowd the highways than ever before, largely because finding a seat on a plane at a desirable price has gotten more difficult. AAA says a record 84.4 million people will drive at least 50 miles between Dec. 22 and Jan. 1. That's 90.5 percent of holiday travelers, up from 89.3 percent six years ago.

Put another way: one in four Americans will be driving long distances for Christmas and New Year's. So expect plenty of traffic jams, crowded highway rest stops and overflowing toll plazas.

The price of gas could be close to the average of $3.23 a gallon that drivers paid last Christmas Day. The price has dropped about 50 cents since September. AAA estimates the average price will range between $3.20 and $3.40 a gallon by New Year's Day, according to AAA. That's pricey, but hardly a deterrent to holiday travel.

"The year-end holiday season remains the least volatile of all travel holidays as Americans will not let economic conditions or high gas prices dictate if they go home for the holidays or kick off the New Year with a vacation," say AAA president and CEO Robert Darbelnet.

The travel forecast done by IHS Global Insight for AAA, one of the nation's largest leisure travel agencies, is based on interviews with 655 Americans and factors in estimates about the overall health of the economy.

While about 1 million more people will driver, fewer will travel by plane.

Airlines for America, the industry's trade group, estimates that about 15 million people will fly between Dec. 17 and Jan. 6. The group says there will be 42 million segments — a takeoff and landing — flown by passengers. That's about 300,000, or 1 percent, fewer segments than last year.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 18, the 353rd day of 2012. There are 13 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 18, 1912, the Piltdown Man made its public debut as fossil collector Charles Dawson reported to the Geological Society of London his discovery of supposedly fragmented early human remains at a gravel pit in Piltdown. (More than four decades later, the Piltdown Man was exposed as a hoax.)

On this date:

In 1892, Tchaikovsky's ballet "The Nutcracker" publicly premiered in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1940, Adolf Hitler ordered secret preparations for Nazi Germany to invade the Soviet Union. (Operation Barbarossa was launched in June 1941.)

In 1962, "Mister Magoo's Christmas Carol," an animated musical adaptation of the Charles Dickens story, first aired on NBC-TV.

In 1971, the Rev. Jesse Jackson announced in Chicago the founding of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity).

In 1972, the United States began heavy bombing of North Vietnamese targets during the Vietnam War. (The bombardment ended 11 days later.)

Ten years ago: Robert Johnson, the billionaire founder of Black Entertainment Television, was chosen as owner of the NBA's new Charlotte expansion franchise.

One year ago: Medical student Sophie Clarke was crowned the winner of CBS' "Survivor: South Pacific."

A Charlie Brown Christmas

When Charlie Brown complains about the materialism he sees around him during the holidays, Lucy suggests he direct the Christmas pageant. He accepts, but it proves to be a frustrating struggle — and when his attempt to restore the proper spirit with a forlorn little fir tree fails, he needs Linus' help to learn the real meaning of Christmas in this charming animated classic, which is accompanied by the short "Prep & Landing: Operation Secret Santa."

7 p.m. on 19
Movie: It's a Very Merry Muppet Christmas Movie

Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy and company mark the holiday season with a TV movie that borrows the theme of "It's a Wonderful Life." A banker (Joan Cusack) plans to tear down the Muppet Theater and build a nightclub, but Kermit tries to talk her out of it with help from a novice angel and his supervisor (David Arquette, Whoopi Goldberg). William H. Macy ("Shameless"), Carson Daly, Kelly Ripa and the "Scrubs" cast have cameos.

7 p.m. on (F)
Movie: Home Alone

Macaulay Culkin stars as a youngster who is mistakenly left home alone when his family leaves for Paris at Christmastime. When two burglars break in, the boy foils their attempts to rob the house by constructing elaborate traps. This classic 1990 comedy from writer John Hughes and director Chris Columbus also stars Joe Pesci, Daniel Stern, John Heard, Roberts Blossom, Catherine O'Hara and John Candy.

8 p.m. on 25
Happy Endings

For years, Jane (Eliza Coupe) has been pretending her birthday is July 25, but it's really Dec. 25. She changed her birthday because she doesn't want to share it with Christmas, so the gang sets out to throw her a Christmas-free birthday. Penny (Casey Wilson) asks Dave (Zachary Knighton), aka "the gift whisperer," for help in finding the perfect present for boyfriend Pete (guest star Nick Zano) in the new episode "No-Ho-Ho."

8 p.m. on 14
The Voice

The competition's third winner is declared in this season finale, as judges Christina Aguilera, Cee Lo Green, Adam Levine and Blake Shelton weigh in on the remaining finalists and their chances for stardom. The appropriate grand prize of a recording contract (plus $100,000) goes to the victor. Carson Daly is the host, and Christina Milian monitors the social-media reaction to what transpires.

8 p.m. on (NG)
Doomsday Preppers

Given very recent history, the eerie irony of the new episode "Escape From New York" is self-evident, since it involves a woman who has worries about a certain kind of disaster affecting the Big Apple: a hurricane. Other segments of the hour involve a college student bracing for a potential crisis at the Indian Point nuclear power plant, and a Wall Street worker concerned that a terrorist will strike at the heart of his area of business.

8:30 p.m. on 9
The Iranian Americans

Even though Iran is in the news virtually every day, many Americans have little knowledge of the stories of the hundreds of thousands of Iranians who live in the U.S. Filmed around the United States — from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C. — this documentary chronicles the underreported history of a group of immigrants finding refuge, overcoming adversity and ultimately creating new lives in America.

9 p.m. on (F)
Movie: The Polar Express

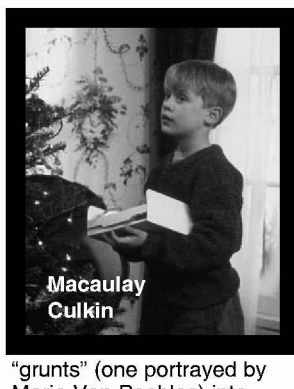

An animated movie unlike any other, director Robert Zemeckis' 2004 interpretation of Chris Van Allsburg's holiday story features Tom Hanks in multiple roles through a technique called "motion capture," which creates a pseudo-real look. Hanks is most recognizable as the conductor of a train that takes a youngster on a wild ride to the North Pole. Also in the voice cast is Peter Scolari, who once teamed with Hanks on the sitcom "Bosom Buddies."

9 p.m. on (L)
My Three Wives

Meet the Dargers — Joe Darger and his three wives, twin sisters Vicki and Val and their cousin Alina — in this hourlong special that chronicles life with the family that inspired the HBO series "Big Love."

9:05 p.m. on (R)
Movie: Heartbreak Ridge

Clint Eastwood takes a few swipes at his own image — while still satisfying his fans — with this 1986 military drama, which he also produced and directed. He plays a career Marine who whips a platoon of young

"grunts" (one portrayed by Mario Van Peebles) into shape for a mission to Grenada. Marsha Mason costars as the Eastwood character's ex-wife, for whom he still has deep feelings.

9:30 p.m. on (A)
Movie: A Christmas Carol

George C. Scott brings all his famous crustiness to the role of Ebenezer Scrooge in this 1984 adaptation of the Charles Dickens' classic. In fact, it almost seems like typecasting when he faces off against the ghosts of Christmas Past, Present and Future before they change him for the better. Look for Edward Woodward ("The Equalizer," "Breaker Morant") in a delightful appearance as the Ghost of Christmas Present.
